This year the Indian Republic turns seventy. Contrary to the doubts that the world had, at the time of our independence, India has emerged as one of the most vibrant democratic Republics. Seventy years back as a newly independent country, we were facing several challenges. Our economy was badly affected by colonial exploitation, our society was fractured due to divide and rule policy of the colonial power, our common heritage was broken into two nations unleashing unprecedented violence and a wounded history, and above all, India as a society facing several challenges. Our independent country, we were seventy years back as a newly vibrant democratic Republics.

Manindra N Thakur

The first and the foremost challenge before India was to write a constitution. India as a political entity was very different in the pre-modern period and it was witnessing a transition from colonialism to an independent nation. Simultaneously, it was also facing a transition pre-modern to a modern society. In these processes, our founding fathers played their role very well. It seems they had a kind of divine consciousness as they were able to visualize a new India free from the vices of colonialism and feudalism. The Constituent Assembly debates are good evidence of their extraordinary commitment to the idea of universal human liberation, instead of narrow parochial viewpoint. Consequently, the constitution they produced is not only a document of rules and regulations governing our nation-state but also one of the most radical documents capable of transforming India into a just and egalitarian society. This is a precious document that India has gifted to its own people and to the people of the world. There is no doubt that for the last seventy years our constitution has stood firm on the test of time, however, we have not been able to take it to the mass consciousness as yet. The challenge ahead is to make it a household text, everyone treating it as a sacred text to be read and followed with some respect. India has a great tradition of communicating complicated philosophies and values through simple stories and parables. Can we do a similar experiment with our constitution, which is a complex legal document? In other words, we need to make constitutional morality a common sense of the Indian people through our great tradition of storytelling?

The second major challenge we faced was that of the economy as colonialism destroyed all the advantages we had in the pre-colonial period when we used to have a bigger

This is a time to celebrate our achievements, however, this also is the time to be concerned about the trials that we are facing today in order to protect our democracy. Republic and the Youth

Dr. Sanjay Kumar

Since we are growing older as a nation, the role of younger people in the nation-building is becoming more important. With over 60 per cent of our citizens below the age of 35 and half of its population below 25 years of age, it is the youth of the country that will determine the direction of the nation. According to a Bloomberg News report, India would have the world’s largest workforce by 2027, with about a billion people aged between 15-64. It is this population, who would have all the responsibility of driving our Nation both within and outside the country. While we are celebrating 70th Republic Day this year, youth of the country must acknowledge the fact that our ancestors fought bravely against the British Rulers and gifted us an independent country. Therefore, it is now the turn of young people to shape the country in a way that it fulfills their aspiration. It also firmly holds the principles of the Constitution of India. With over 1.3 billion population and uneven development of different regions in the country, the future India has tough battles ahead. First, they have to find space for their own aspirations. Secondly, they need to contribute towards the development of the country. To Gandhi, the youth are the agents of social change. They have the capacity to establish an ideal society based on the immortal principles of truth and nonviolence. The youth of today should fight against corruption both in personal and public life, develop a strong sense of volunteerism and practice tolerance in order to continue with the glory of the Republic of India.

In a journey to explore potential of our own self and contributing to the development of the country, the youth of today should be following the path, which were lived and prescribed by the founding fathers of the freedom movement and the constitution. We all tend to refer to personalities from the past and the present in order to learn best practices for our own lives. Until now, our heroes have been the leaders of freedom movement or those who served the Nation after the independence as scientists, sportspersons, presidents, prime

Some people, perhaps forty of them, from Bannu had come to me. They have suffered hardships no doubt but they are able to walk. Some had injured fingers, some had other wounds on other parts of the body. I saw them just now and told them to explain everything to Brijkrishna. They were all respectable men. They must have been full of anger but they accepted my advice. One of them—I did not ask whether he was a refugee—said I had done enough harm already and that I should stop and disappear from the scene. He did not care whether I was a mahatma. I asked him where he wanted me to go. He said that I might go to the Himalayas. I had to rebuke him. He is not as old as I am and is stronger. But I could not afford to become nervous. I asked why should I go to the Himalayas merely because he wished it, when there were many others who wished me to stay. There are many who praise me and there are others who abuse me. What am I to do? I cannot only do as God bids. You may say that you do not believe in God. But then you must allow me to go my way. God is the help of the afflicted. But an afflicted person is not God. When I claim that every woman is my own sister or daughter, then her suffering becomes my suffering. Why do you presume that I do not understand the sufferings of the refugees? Why do you presume that because I am a friend of Muslims I am an enemy of Hindus and Sikhs? I cannot run away because anyone wants me to run away. I have not taken service to anyone’s bidding. I have become what I have become at the bidding of God. God will do what He wills. He may take me away. I shall not find peace by going to the Himalayas. I want to find peace in the midst of turmoil or I want to die in the turmoil. My Himalayas are here.

I keep receiving complaints about the refugees. They are given food and drink and clothing and they are helped in every possible way. But they do not want to work. I have said that if the refugees want to end their sufferings, if they want to convert suffering into happiness and serve India and serve themselves, they must not shirk work. A refugee has no right to live comfortably without working. The Cebu says: “Eat only after you have performed yoga.” Eat what remains after the yajna. This has not been said only for me but also for you and all others. It applies also to the refugees. Even if a millionaire eats and does not work, he is a burden on the earth. Of course one can understand if you are a cripple, or if you are blind or too old. But a robust man has no excuse for not working. Let those who are strong of body clean lavatories in the camp; let them spin, let them do any other work that comes to hand. Let them teach their boys.

someone came to see me today. I forget his name. He mentioned peasants. I said if I had my way our Governor-General would be a peasant; our Prime Minister would be a peasant. In my childhood I learnt a poem which says “0 farmer, you are the king, the master of the whole world.” What would we eat if the peasant did not produce food? But today we have made him a slave. What can a peasant do? Must he acquire academic degrees such as B.A. and M.A.? If he does that he will be ruined. He will be no more good for wielding the pickaxe. If the man who produced foodgrain out of the earth becomes our Chief, our Prime Minister, the face of India will change. There is a scarcity of food in Madras. A representative of the Governor-General had come here to plead with Shri Jairamdas that he should make foodgrain available for Madras. This attitude of the people of Madras saddens me. I want to point out to them that they can find enough things to eat in their own province such as groundnut, coconut and various other things. They also have plenty of fish which most of them take. What need is there for them to go out and beg? It is not right for them to insist on rice and that too polished rice which has all its food value removed or to insist on wheat in place of rice. They can mix groundnut flour or coconut flour with rice flour and thus keep the wolf from the door. What they need is self-confidence and dedication. I have said that the people of Madras are quite well. I had with me in South Africa people drawn from all the linguistic areas of the Province. During the satyagraha march they were given a pound and a half of bread and an ounce of sugar each day. But they surprised me when on our striking camp they would pick out some edible greens or some other thing and cook it singing. How can such resourceful people feel so helpless? True we were all cookies. But then in honest work lies our freedom and the satisfaction of all our basic needs.

she said she was not afraid. Had she been afraid she would not have gone to work in Noakhali. Many people who live in the Punjab have been completely ruined in every way. At least she can still find food and other provisions. I consulted Mr. Cross and he welcomed the idea. He said he could act as an interpreter. He is from the Red Cross. The function of the Red Cross is to provide medical relief to war victims. Whether Dr. Sushila went with Mr. Cross or Mr. Cross went with Sushila is a complicated question but they are friends and like each other. They have gone to render service and not to make money. ### WHAT TO DO IN THE LAST MONTH BEFORE THE BOARD EXAMS?

For Class XII:

- BSE Odisha is introducing changes in its HSC (High School Certificate) Exam 2019
- Studies
- Employment News 26 January - 1 February 2019
- EDITORIAL

Rruchi Shrimalli

The CBSE Board Exams for Class 12 are due to start on February 15, 2019 while the ISC board exams for Class 12 students will start on February 4, 2019. The examinations of various other boards will also start round this time.

When you have less than a month in hand to prepare for your exams, the only strategy that works is to focus on the core content for the first few days. This is what you need to learn to pass the exams. For example, in Physics, there are theorems you need to prove. If you understand them and learn to apply them, you will be able to pass the exam.

You can also solve the last years’ papers and the sample papers - and analyse them. Read through at least 3-5 solved previous year question papers and model papers and see what type of questions have been asked. You may also want to make a note of which topics have been asked most often.

You may also seek help from your teachers and friends who study all around the year and find the important topics for each subject you have to study. Topics that can fetch you more marks need to be studied first.

1. In the First Phase, focus on the Core Content

   - Have less than a month in hand to prepare for your exams, the only strategy that works is to focus on the core content for the first few days. This is what you need to learn to pass the exams. For example, in Physics, there are theorems you need to prove. If you understand them and learn to apply them, you will be able to pass the exam.

   - You may also seek help from your teachers and friends who study all around the year and find the important topics for each subject you have to study. Topics that can fetch you more marks need to be studied first.

2. In the Second Phase, solve as many questions as you can

   - Once you have read the major portions of your board exam syllabus, solve the questions related to the topics you consider most important. Also solve previous years’ question papers. It will help you identify topics which you need to re-visit and the topics which you are good and can skip for now.
   - Solving the question papers gives you two-fold benefits. On one hand, it helps you evaluate your revision as you try and recall what you have learned during the exam; and on the other hand, it gives you confidence that you will at least be able to do some questions on the big day.
   - Don’t rush through the topics you are weak in, revise them once more and re-do the question paper. In the end, compare your answers with the ones given in the given solutions. You will find many websites that offer step-by-step solution to the previous years’ question papers of the board exams. These solutions may help you find some tips and tricks that you can use on the actual day of the exam. Once you read about these tips, try and use them in the next paper you solve, so that you can remember them when you need them.

3. In the Third Phase, revise in the first-half part and study for the first two exams in the second-half part

   - As you draw closer to your board exams, it is time for the power play. For the first half of the third phase, revise all that you’ve covered in the first two phases. Go through the theorems, formulas, grammatical rules and the main points of the chapters. Many sites offer free revision notes and mind maps that you can see at this time.
   - In the second half of the third phase, focus on the first and second exams. Revise everything and go through the solved examples once more. During this phase, devote half the day to the first exam and then devote the other half of the day to the second exam.
   - Luckily, board exams offer you one or two-day breaks between any two exams. Check your exam schedule - and prepare for those exams first that are falling on consecutive days or have less in-between days.

The Indian economy was made subsystems of the world economy of the colonial power resulting in the drain of wealth from our country. As we know, Indian national movement was deeply concerned about these irrational community rules, they are mostly based on cultural and regionalism. The leading authors of the Indian freedom struggle introduced several socio-religious reforms to overcome this. However, after independence, most of them got relegated to the background as the nationalist elite believed that the state would take over the responsibility of reforming our social practices. We know that it was a paradigm shift: in the decades to come, these communities have to take this social responsibility of reforming these irrational community rules.

In sum, India at seventy is full of energy and new promises. Our people are ready to take the nation ahead in the new world where the axis of power is shifting towards Asia. India as a nation is growing stronger every day to play a pivotal role in this process. Despite all the limitations, Indian democracy has produced some of the most vibrant democracies in the world and for this Indian people must be congruent with themselves. Our Indian leaders are ready to carry forward the dreams of the founding fathers who spend their lives struggling for a free egalitarian society. There are reasons to hope that in times to come India would emerge as an exemplar for the democracies across the world. –

Constitution of India

India, also known as Bharat, is a Union of States. It is a Sovereign Socialist Democratic Republic with a parliamentary system of government. The Constitution was adopted in terms of the Constitution of India which was adopted by the Constituent Assembly on 26th November, 1949 and came into force on 26th January, 1950. The Constitution provides for a Parliamentary form of government which is federal in structure with certain unitary features. The constitutional head of the Executive is the President. Article 52(1) specifies that the President of the Republic of India shall be elected by the members of the Parliament elected by the people of India. The President is elected for a term of five years.

The Constitution provides that there shall be a Council of Ministers with the Prime Minister as its head to aid and advise the President, who shall exercise his/her functions only in accordance with its aid and advice. The Prime Minister is also the head of the Government of India.

The Indian parliament is bicameral and consists of the President of India as its second chamber. It comprises two houses:

1. The Council of States (the State Legislature) which consists of the President as its ex-officio member
2. The Lok Sabha which is the House of the People

Sitting members of both houses before the Constitution are elected by citizens of India who are above the age of 18 years. Members of the Lok Sabha are elected directly while members of the Rajya Sabha are indirectly elected by the state legislative assemblies.

The President is the ultimate authority of India. Article 50 specifies that the President is the representative of the people of India. The Parliament is the Supreme Authority of India. Article 216 prescribes that the Parliament has the power to make laws for the peace, order and good government of India.

How to focus for longer number of hours?

Many students find it difficult to focus for a stretch of time. They seem to lose concentration as their mind goes blank for a while. Here are some tips to help you study for a longer duration without losing your concentration.

1. If there are things on your mind that you need to time, replace them immediately. Mobile phones, wires, games, books that are not related to what you are studying - all vie for your attention and cause distraction. So, de-clutter your study desk and organise your study room to be able to concentrate on your studies better.
2. Caffeine (or any form of caffeine) raises your alertness for some time but then, your concentration comes down. So, you have to adopt such a manner that it doesn't become impossible to sit for long hours. For example, with high glycemic index (GI) or more carbohydrates make you feel full but they can make you feel hungry early. It is better to take small meals every two to three hours.
3. Take a yellow-coloured chart and write on it, why you need to study. It might be your career goals, the college you want to get into, your parents and family proud of you or a boy or girl you like. It can be anything that can keep you motivated. Yellow is the colour of optimism. Frame this chart up in front of your study desk and whenever you feel dull, look at the reason why you need to study. It will give you a new sense of energy and vigour.

Keeping this in mind, solving questions at the end of the exam, solving sample papers, using flash cards, taking quizzes, and making charts are some of the ways best ways to learn the things that need to be memorised.

Once you have a test or solve a question, find the answers in the study material you have. Finding the answers will help you focus on the relevant portion of the text. This will help you cement the information you have and you will never forget it again.

REPUBLIC AND PEOPLE

ministers and so on and so forth. The generation until now, have been playing a crucial role in the nation. In order to continue growing in a better shape, the youth of today have the responsibility to perform national duties and become pillars of tomorrow's growth. For the youth of today, their time in History is now. It all depends on themselves to be a part of the less service to the nation. They must gain economically to sustain themselves and their family. However, there are ample opportunities in the country where they can contribute to help others and to the society.

Those who are aiming to enter into the government service, would definitely get immense opportunity to serve the nation in different ways. But that percentage would be very small. Different government agencies offer about 3% of jobs that are formal. So rest of the workforce is in the informal sector, which does not offer social security or regular tenure. As larger part of the youth will have to find their career in the informal sector, their own struggle to survive and simultaneously serve the nation through some voluntary engagement would always be a challenge.

Those who are going to join the government service should always remember that they have inbuilt duties with integrity and with a feeling that they are directly serving the nation. The youth of today must adopt as their motto, which is so deep rooted in our Constitution of India, as citizens equality of status and of rights. The youth of today have immense energy and the potential to set things in a right perspective and in the right direction. What they need to develop and maintain are qualities of themselves for themselves and for our beautiful motherland. They must develop some ideals that are higher than their own personal material accomplishments. That is the love for their country and for their brothers and sisters who are left behind on the ladder of development.

Let us congratulate ourselves and pay deep gratitude towards the founding fathers of our Constitution on the occasion of 70th Republic Day. Let the youth of this country take us towards a better India.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has said that the Constitutional amendment to provide 10 per cent reservation to economically poor in the general category was achieved due to the political will of his government. Mr Modi said, the economic reservation has been given without impacting the existing social reservations. He said, the new reservation will be implemented in 40,000 colleges across 900 universities in the country from this academic year. Prime Minister said, the number of seats will be increased by 10 per cent. Mr Modi was addressing a gathering after inaugurating the 1500 bed Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel Institute of Medical Science and Research at Ahmedabad in Gujarat. Mr Modi said the Institute will be linked to the Ayush-man Bharat scheme so that poor people can avail medical facilities free of cost. Prime Minister said, this will be the first government hospital to have a helipad. Mr Modi said the new medical facility will help boost health sector in Gujarat.
