There is a new awareness that even in democracies based on Universal Adult Franchise, every adult citizen has one vote. But, it does not ensure that every citizen is equally empowered. For example, women, minorities, marginalized social group like race or caste. Of all the groups that need empowerment, women is one such category. Empowerment of women is a prerequisite to transform a society into a developed one. They are a potential resource for the overall balanced development. As they constitute 50% of the human population, they alone can turn a developing society into a developed one. They are a marginalized social group like women, minorities, etc. In this context, empowerment is seen as an answer to exploitation, oppression, injustice, through their capacity building or skill development by driving towards literacy and education. Being disempowered means to be denied choices and empowerment is the process that enables the person to make choices, those who have been denied earlier. The empowerment and autonomy of women and the improvement of their political, social, economic and health status is a highly important issue in society. In addition, it is essential for the achievement of sustainable development. The identification and participation of both women and men is required in productive and reproductive life, including shared responsibilities for the care and nurturing of children and maintenance of the household.

Translation is an activity that aims at conveying meaning or intentions of a given linguistic discourse from one language to another. Translation can be defined in terms of sameness of meaning across languages. According to some researchers, there can be no absolute correspondence between languages and hence no fully exact translations. Translation at some level is always possible, however, there are times when interlocutors are aware that they do not mean the same by particular phrases. Meaning is formed on each occasion of linguistic interaction and is therefore unique and not replicable. Therefore, a translation can never ‘mean’ the same as the source text. But this does not matter, because practice ensures that translators ‘get away with’ translating well sufficiently often. The word ‘translate’ comes from the Latin ‘translatus’ where ‘trans’ means across and ‘latas’ means carrying; the word thus means the carrying across of meaning from one language to the other. The various Indian language words for translation do not convey this meaning. Aruvad (speak after), bhashantar (linguistic transference), tarjuma (reproduction), rooptantar (change of form), vividantran (change), roopantar (change of script), what P. Lal, one of India’s well-known translators, has described as ‘transcreation’. This is a process whereby the translation, rather than a docile transference of meaning from one linguistic system to the other, becomes a retelling by the translator in another language. So this implies that our basic concept of translation was different, and we need to explore if this is because classical Indian critical theories conceptualized it differently.

Translation is the communication of the meaning of a source language text by means of an equivalent target language text. The English language draws a terminological distinction (not all languages do) between translating (a written text) and interpreting (oral or sign-language communication between users of different languages). Under this distinction, translation can begin only after the appearance of writing within a language community. A translator always risks inadvertently introducing source-language words grammar, or syntax into the target-language rendering. On the other hand, Translation is the process that enables the person to make choices, those who have been denied earlier. The empowerment and autonomy of women and the improvement of their political, social, economic and health status is a highly important issue in society. In addition, it is essential for the achievement of sustainable development. TRANSLATION AS A CAREER AND ITS SCOPE

As India passed into the medieval period, the decision-making capacity at all levels in all spheres of life. This, in turn, is essential for the achievement of sustainable development. The identification and participation of both women and men is required in productive and reproductive life, including shared responsibilities for the care and nurturing of children and maintenance of the household.

The influence of Indian critical theory also impacted other aspects of translation. Equivalent as we understand it is essential for the achievement of sustainable development. The identification and participation of both women and men is required in productive and reproductive life, including shared responsibilities for the care and nurturing of children and maintenance of the household.

The Government of India has taken measures to promote the fulfillment of girls' and women's potential through education, skills development and the eradication of illiteracy for all girls and women without discrimination of any kind, giving paramount importance to the elimination of poverty and ill health. Government has taken necessary measures to ensure universal access, on the basis of equality between women and men, to appropriate, affordable and quality care and health for women throughout their life cycle. National machineries for the advancement of women have been established in almost every member state to, inter alia, design, promote the implementation of, execute, monitor, evaluate, advocate and mobilize support for policies that promote the advancement of women.

Some of the most noteworthy programmes introduced by the Government of India in the last four years have been thoughtfully crafted and covers a lot of ground towards the upliftment of women. There are many such schemes that have been introduced and are well-intentioned.

Here is a quick summary of some of the most recent government schemes for women:

- Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao: meant for upholding the health and in the sphere of women's education.
- Sukanya Samriddhi Account: meant to help families save for their daughters.
- One Stop Centre scheme: to offer easy access for women suffering from domestic abuse or violence, and needing support.
- Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana: to offer free LPG connections to women living below poverty line.
- Mahila Haat: to support women entrepreneurs and women self-help groups.
- Rajiv Gandhi National Crèche Scheme for Children of Working Mothers: to provide affordable day-care services to working women.
- Maternity Benefit Scheme: for pregnant women and lactating mothers.
- Women's Helpline 1091: to provide emergency help, medical support and legal aid to women and girls even below 18 years of age.

Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana (2016)

Launched in March 2016, this is a step by the Government of India to keep every household fed and aims at providing free LPG connection to women below poverty line. It gained a lot of attention due to the social campaign and an appeal to the affluent class to give up LPG subsidy in favour of weaker classes. Making sure that each family has a LPG connection will have two way advantages. It will not only work for upliftment of women by improving their health, pushing them away from smoke and dust, but also save non-renewable resources used for fire by these people. They only need to submit the required documents and make an application to garner benefit of this scheme.

Mahila E-Haat (2016)

This plan emphasizes on empowering women entrepreneurs, NGOs, self-help groups and small producers. It was introduced in March 2016, this bilingual portal presents e-commerce platform for women all over our country to showcase products manufactured, and the services offered by them to their customers. This portal shall act as a catalyst for their business and requires only a mobile number to be accessed from anywhere in the world and is integrated with the ‘Digital India’ and ‘Stand up India’ social campaigns to boost the Indian economy.

Maternity Benefit Program (2017)

This scheme is for the benefit of pregnant and lactating women in India and provides cash benefits for the deaths of the young children and the child being and proving just as we are about our boys. This social campaign comprises of more than 100 identified districts with alarmingly low sex ratio by extending Rs. 1 crore each. Sukanya Samriddhi Account (2015)

It was launched in January 2015. The government is making efforts not only to save more and more girls but is equally determined to provide them with better and economically secured future. India being a nation where although women are worshipped in every religion, society is keener on getting them married rather than educated. Instead, this plan concentrates on helping families financially for their daughters' education and not for any other expenses. In accordance with this saving scheme, parents or guardians can open an account in the name of their daughter with any bank or post office with a minimum amount. Multiple deposits of any value can be made every year up to 14 years from date of opening account. The deposit made can be claimed as deduction under Sec 80C of Income Tax. Also interest earned, presently 8.4% p.a, is also tax-free.

Conclusion

For the overall social development, it is extremely important to ensure that every individual is economically, socially and politically empowered. Empowerment of women is seen as a constituent as well as an instrument of development. No country can be considered to be developed if half of its population is severely disadvantaged in terms of basic needs, livelihood options, access to knowledge and political voice. The realization of these goals needs to be supported by the allocation of necessary human and financial resources to ensure gender equality at the local, regional, national and international levels.

Programmes related to women's opportunities, potentials and activities should have a dual focus. On one hand, programmes should aim at meeting the basic as well as the specific needs of women for capacity building, organizational development and empowerment. Small interventions are required to stimulate participation of women in the development process. To combat the entire social and gender inequalities, empowerment is seen as very crucial and important. Since 1950s onwards, different approaches related to women and social policies were adopted. The approaches shifted from one to another on the basis of their needs. The wider approaches on the basis of which different policies have been adopted are the welfare approach, the development approach, and the empowerment approach. Every approach has a role to play in ensuring women's empowerment. It is extremely important to ensure that no woman is left behind in the implementation mechanism. These mechanisms are frequently hampered by unclear mandates, lack of adequate statistical data, training and sufficient resources, and insufficient support from national political leadership.

The concept, as in achieving the same meaning in the target language as in the source language, continues to be a major concern as far as Indian translators were concerned. But there was a different sort of equation in Indian context. The history of translation is related to the history of the often invisible cross-cultural interactions, dialogues and concepts from the East notably India, China and Iraq have their roots in the cultural life as early as the sixth century. When trade ties were first established between India and the Persian Gulf countries, translators had to translate works from one language into others in a significant way.
The United States has ordered its non-emergency embassy staff to leave Venezuela but refused to comply with a full expulsion demanded by Nicolas Maduro, who Washington says is no longer president. Maduro gave US diplomats 72 hours to leave the country after President Donald Trump, backed by major Latin American nations refused to recognise him as Venezuela's legitimate president and instead recognised Juan Guaido, the opposition head of the National Assembly.
