ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE IN AGRICULTURE

ISSUES AND PROSPECTS

Naveen P Singh & Ranjith PC

Technology is the key driver of 21st century world. From the trunk dial to video call, steam engine to metro, sprayer to drones, technology has revolutionised the life of humans around the world. Besides, it also played crucial role to industrialize the countries around the world and formalized their economy in a significant way. The world is now ready to embrace the idea of 4th Industrial revolution which is likely to be led by Artificial Intelligence (AI). At this juncture it is imperative to give a big push to a rather neglected sector: Agriculture, by leveraging AI so as to revive and sustain the sector for the generations ahead.

Technology in agriculture is a decisive element in enhancing the scale of production and productivity. As per Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) estimates, India has to double its agriculture output by 2050 to feed the growing population. In the wake of fragmentation and subdivision of land holdings coupled with less emphasis on collective and cooperative farming, the arable land cannot be increased. The only viable option before us is to increase the productivity of the available land through improved technology. However, it is a established fact that technology adoption in farming sector is very slow due to several inherent reasons. In addition the required skill sets at individual farmer level to operationalize the modern agriculture technology is less than required. Apart from this, technology has to face behavioural test (Technology adoption) of individual farmers. With these problems and challenges on hand, the solution lies in our finger tips, that is to bring AI led innovation to agriculture, which is having less human interface in decision making and high adoption of needed technologies.

Input to policy shift

Improving agricultural productivity is not a simple task. It involves activities starting from crop decision to final harvest and marketing of farm produce. Usually, many of our farmers rely on experiential knowledge/traditional wisdom to decide on ploughing, sowing seeds, applying fertilizers and pesticides and harvesting the produce. But, it is less viable in curbing the wide array of challenges viz., pest, disease, monsoon etc. leading to low yields and thereby face economic hardships. Therefore scientific intervention in ensuring farmer to be informed is crucial to enhance farm productivity.

Hence, the solution for these problems and challenges is to have a self-guided automatic model that understands the behavior of various stakeholders for the benefit of all. Moreover, Artificial Intelligence (AI) is part of the solutions towards improved agricultural productivity. AI can be described as simulated algorithmic computer models that mimic the human behavior. The process begins with imagining a robotic friend/installed application that guides our farmer when to grow, harvest and sell his/her produce and link our agriculture resource persons to track the most pressing problems faced by farmers through searches (Google analytics) made by farmers so that they can act/react immediately. It can also act as digital data for policymakers for exploring various effective programme/policy options and interventions thereof. Moreover AI would be prudent option to leverage before

CAREERS IN BUSINESS ANALYTICS

Dr. Satya Prakash Pandey

The technological advances of the last decades have impacted our world, and the business world in particular, in fundamental ways. Massive amounts of data are being gathered and stored, from individual medical records to every single truck movement via GPS for large logistics providers. Consequently to decades of information technology deployment, organizations today have more information at hand than ever before. But in many cases the information is not being utilized to out-think the rivals. Thus, organizations are missing out on a potent competitive tool.

Moreover, ever faster computers and optimization methods have become available to transform this data into information for better decision-making. All of this makes it possible to apply advanced analytical methods to business problems that were impossible two decades ago - ranging from detailed supply chain optimization to health care applications and the service industry. Data driven decisions based on the principles of management science and operations research have always been popular in large, professionally managed corporates but have become far more pervasive with the emergence of data science and business analytics. Data science grew out an exponential growth in the availability of data that is automatically generated through digital transactions like phone calls, card swipes, electronic fund transfers, e-Commerce, social media and finally, from smart sensors that are a part of the “Internet of Things”.

The ancient science of statistics has found a new life and relevance because of the availability of software tools and techniques that allow oceans of data to be churned at ease to yield the valuable butter of managerial insight that allows us to address real life situations faced by managers in areas like retail, telecom, banking, finance, insurance and operations as well as Politics also. This is the genesis of the Business Analytics.

Business Analytics

Business analysis is the discipline of identifying business needs and determining solutions to business problems. These solutions may include improvement of business processes, accommodating/ incorporating new processes or strategic planning and policy development. The person who performs this role of identification and determination is called a Business Analyst or BA. This role has emerged with evolution of software engineering and raise of Rational Unified Process-RUP to mitigate risk in project management. Clients do not have the time to make the technical team understand how business

Business Analytics is about quantitative analysis and predictive modeling towards data-driven decision strategies. Exemplars of analytics are using tools to identify their most profitable customers; offer the right price; accelerate product innovation; optimize supply chains; identify the true drivers of business performance.

Barclay's, Capital One, Procter & Gamble, and other leading organizations as diverse as Walmart and Boeing are using tools to identify the most profitable customers; offer the right price; and improve business performance (present and future). A Business Analyst also determines the right approach to improve the business. Business Analytics involves human technology that combines business domain expertise with limited statistical abilities. This gap is filled by Data Scientists who are advanced statisticians.

A Business Scientist develops and deploys algorithms using statistical programming that support the Business Analyst’s plans. A Data Scientist automates the Data Analyst’s plans and models to help the business enhance output and performance.

Business Analyst vs. Data Scientist

Business Analysts & Data Science lie at the intersection of three key disciplines, namely Statistics & Machine Learning, Programming, and the targeted Business Domain and this program is designed to address all three in significant depth. The backbone of analytics is the theory of statistics in general and machine learning in particular and these two key areas are offered as two different areas.

The role of a Business Analyst involves researching and extracting valuable information from data sources to explain business performance (present and future). A Business Analyst also determines the right approach to improve the business. Business Analytics involve a domain expert with limited statistical abilities. Business Problems

Business problem needs solutions based on data, not intuition. Yet most organizations struggle to translate the abundance of data they have today into meaningful business insights. Nor more than ever, data analytics, approached with the right mindset, is an essential function for business management.

Need for Business Analytics

Business problems need solutions based on data, not intuition. Yet most organizations struggle to translate the abundance of data they have today into meaningful business insights. Nor more than ever, data analytics, approached with the right mindset, is an essential function for business management.

Business Analyst is a hybrid IT/business professional much in demand but scarce in availability. A Business Analyst needs to have good business acumen, best practices, helps in building appropriate solution strategies, provides solution assessment & validation etc. A well trained and an experienced Business Analyst is an indispensable asset to any organization. He can help frame problems, create comparisons, forecast outcomes, and make predictions. And the people who can make meaning from data in a way that stakeholders and executives can understand often become some of the most valued people in a company.

Skill Gap (Market Size)

There has been extensive popular interest in Business Analyst over the past few years, including popular business press books like "Competing on Analytics and Predictive Analytics." This reflects the significant business interest in using analytics to improve business advantage. Employment forecasts predict a huge growth for managers who understand analytics to lead big data initiatives in the business world.

The demand for Business analytics is huge in both domestic and international job markets. According to Newscom, India's analytics market would increase two times to INR 15000 Crores by the end of 2019. There has never been a better time to make a career into Business Analytics. This course will assist prospective interns in preparing for a career in the field of data analytics by providing you with the edge right from the start.

Individual Benefits

Competence in the principles and practices of business analysis.

Participation in a recognized professional group.

Recognition of professional competence by professional peers and management.

Advanced career potential due to recognition as a professional business analysis practitioner.

Apply methods, tools, and software for acquiring, managing/storing, and accessing structured and unstructured data.

Prepare data for statistical analysis, perform basic exploratory and descriptive analysis, and apply statistical techniques to analyze data.

Apply descriptive, predictive and prescriptive analytics to business modeling and decision-making.

Demonstrate orally, and in writing, the ability to explain complex analytical models and results.

Business Prospects

Business Analyst is one of the most critical roles in a business, compared to the other skills. Following are the points, which make Business Analyst unique, and most sought skill among professionals.

- Improving the decision-making process (quality & relevance)
- It is technologically independent
- Having penetration to all the business domains.

- Offer better risk management and future planning to the organization.

- Have a critical role to play in global offshore delivery model.

- Unlike of technical skills, it is functional in nature and does not have dynamic nature, i.e.

- Whatever you learn today, it is going to help you throughout your life, but technology changes in every 6 months.

- As its nature is more related so pay and perks are always on higher side than technology jobs, provide better job security, as in case of economic slowdown the role of Business Analyst team becomes more critical.

- Growth path is fastest, because nature of the job is Managerial.

- Gives better job satisfaction as one is involved in core analysis, instead of just box thinking is always appreciable in this, and whatever you learn you apply in real time.

Skill Gain

As opted this, interns will chart a path to analytics excellence for themselves or for division and for the organization. They know how to use business analytics as a strategic advantage.

Customer Analytics

Customer analytics, also called customer data analytics, is the systematic examination of a company’s customer information and customer behavior to identify, attract and retain the most profitable customers.

Descriptive Analytics

Descriptive analytics uses historical data and can’t describe about current problems and behaviors. It describes a causal relationship and data which describes a correlative one as you explore the synergy between data and decisions, including the principles for collecting data and interpreting data to make better business decisions. Interns also learn how data is used to explore a problem or question, and how

1. Avoiding the monoculture practices
2. Adopting minimum tillage
3. Avoiding the cultivation of plantation crops
4. Using crop residues to cover soil surface
5. Adopting spatial and temporal crop sequencing/crop rotations
Which of the following, according to the code given below: (a) 1, 3 and 5 (b) 1, 3 and 4 (c) 1, 2, 3 and 5 (d) 1, 2, 3 and 4

Q60. The term “Sixth mass extinction/sixth extinction” is often mentioned in the news in the context of the discussion of
(a) Widespread monoculture practices in agriculture and large-scale commercial farming with indiscriminate use of chemicals in many parts of the world that may result in the loss of good native ecosystems.
(b) Fear of a possible collision of a meteorite with the Earth in the near future in the manner it happened 65 million years ago that caused the mass extinction of many species including those of dinosaurs.
(c) Large scale cultivation of genetically modified crops in many parts of the world and their growing in other parts of the world which may cause the disappearance of good native crop plants and the loss of food biodiversity.
(d) Mankind's over-exploitation/minuse of natural resources, fragmentation/loss of natural habitats, destruction of ecosystems, pollution and global climate change.
Which of the statements given above is/are correct?
(a) 1 only (b) 1 and 2 only (c) 2 only (d) 2 and 3 only

Q61. With reference to the Indian Regional Navigation Satellite System (IRNSS), consider the following statements:
1. The IRNSS system comprises 8 satellites in geosynchronous orbit.
2. IRNSS covers entire India and about 5500 sq. km beyond its borders.
3. India has its own satellite navigation system with full global coverage by the middle of 2019.
Which of the statements given above is/are correct?
(a) 1 only (b) 1 and 2 only (c) 2 and 3 only (d) None

Q62. With reference to the following phenomena:
1. Light is affected by gravity.
2. The Universe is constantly expanding.
3. Matter warps its surrounding space-time.
Which of the above is/are the predictions/indications of Albert Einstein's General Theory of Relativity, often discussed in media?
(a) 1 and 2 only (b) 3 only (c) 1 and 3 only (d) 1, 2 and 3

Q63. With reference to the Genetically Modified mustard (GM mustard) developed in India, consider the following statements:
1. GM mustard has the genes of a soil bacterium that give the plant the property of growing taller than a wide variety of pests.
2. GM mustard has the genes that allow the plant cross-pollination and hybridization.
3. GM mustard has been developed jointly by IARI and Punjab Agricultural University.
Which of the statements given above is/are correct?

policy establishments who are toiling to double the farmers' income by 2022. The collection of massive data by way of digitization of agriculture is to give a new dimension to develop and deploy AI in agriculture. Last year, farmers of Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh rely on the messages for sowing crops delivered using AI by Microsoft and International Crop Research Institute for the Semi-Arid Tropics (ICRISAT). Globally, AI has provided wider opportunities to farmers, organizations and governments. For instance in Tanzania, Google open source of disease free AI discovered disease with 98% accuracy and deployed robotics to pluck the weeds, as also been evidenced in other countries. However, it is early to gauge the impact of AI in numerical terms but surely AI will transform the agriculture package and other policy standards.

Market prediction and supply chain management
Marketing is the critical factor in agriculture to deliver the fruits of growth to farmers downoet. Which is very essential in bringing income security and rural prosperity. Even in the modern marketing systems, two fundamental things drive the farmers income to prosperity: grading and price prediction. Crop quality and price prediction is graded according to physical parameters (chemical composition in case of fruits and nuts) through automated and advanced analytics. AI being a tool is creating a lot of awareness amongst the farmers about the benefits of using AI for crop monitoring. This is absolutely crucial, as this particular practice helps in reducing the yields and posing severe threat to food security. The most preferable type of AI to explore and conserve the interests of the farmers is Reactive AI, where it basically works on perception of surrounding conditions and acts on what it sees. Thus, any deviation of the food and health would be easily recognized so as to ensure fertility status of soil and quality of water. Further AI led reactive algorithms and models can also use the integrated data signals from satellite and compare it with the local farm image thereby helping to know soil health and thereby immediate action plan to restore the soil health. Thus, it reduces the high cost of laboratory testing in soil and water quality. It also takes care of the space availability to each crop before sowing/deciding. Apart from this, integration of value chains- supply and storage space (current no functional mechanism to trace storage availability), procurement and ICT enabled banking services help to bring globalization in value chains. Possibly to aid this endeavour of market prediction and price forecasting, AI limited as it is, predicts things on evolutionary ladder which would be helpful.

Soil and water management
As the Indian soils are containing the crop specific requirement and assess the moisture content in the field using the remote satellite and signals from farmer through text message. This can also augment laying of auto irrigation from borewell. This helps in curtailing the indiscriminate usage of water resources. As the Indian soils are becoming the storehouse of chemical residues causing significant imbalances in soil health on one hand and yield gaps across different crops and regions, it is imperative to leverage AI to holddown the high cost soil to solution ahead. NITI Aayog has recently cautioned about severe water crisis that country might face in next decades as nearly 70% of rainfall in the country depends on monsoon. This statement sounds clear signal to look for an alternative methods for judicious resource use.

Agri-Startup
Several startups become key in unearthing the farm potential by providing the crucial technology. Some of the AI startups like CropX, Ahmadi, Agri-Bot, Satture and SatSure are successfully using the AI to predict yield, stabilize the yield, analyze and predict economic value of future yield. Further giving emphasis and incentives to AI led innovation and startups will add significant push to algorithmic models. As a result, the fact that startup become new age tech giant in India that could be trusted to achieve sustainable agriculture, own the ground on the hand and securing food and nutrition security to the people on the other hand. This may go a long way in achieving sustainable developmental goals (SDGs) effectively.

Takeoff: Current digital drive
Digitization of agriculture is on its path even though it has been ranked on bottom in the industry surveys on the state of digitalization. The AI driven digital transformation through Digital India programme reaching the villages through OFC is essential input in leveraging AI techniques in agriculture. With the field of ~30 million smart phone owning farmers and an expected increase of internet usage in rural India increasing the scope of situation has placed India to the pressing sector in current and future stages. The immediate reform needed is to bring the AI policy to higher levels of priority to solve the urgent and most pressing problems on priority basis. This policy has to touch upon most vulnerable and high cost sectors and state governments is a must.

to use that data to create products, marketing campaigns, and other strategies. By understanding this interns have a solid understanding of effective data collection and interpretation so that you can use the right data to make the right decision for business organization.

Predictive Analytics

Once data has been collected and interpreted, what do we do with it? One will learn how to take the next step: how to use data about actions in the past to make-to-make predictions about actions in the future. Interns will examine the main tools used to predict behavior, and learn how to determine which tool is right for which decision purposes. Additionally, they will learn the language and the frameworks for making predictions of future behavior. Getting this they will be able to determine what kinds of predictions you can make to create future strategies, understand the most powerful techniques for predictive models including regression analysis, and be prepared to take full advantage of analytics to create effective data-driven business decisions.

Prescriptive Analytics

One learns how prescriptive analytics provide recommendations for actions you can take to achieve your business goals. First, you’ll explore how to ask the right questions, how to define your objectives, and how to optimize for success. You’ll also examine critical examples of prescriptive models, including how quantity is impacted by price, how to maximize revenue, how to maximize profits, and how to best use online advertising i.e. social media & strategy. By the end of this module, interns may be able to define a problem, define a good objective, and explore models for optimization which take competition into account, so that you can write prescriptions for data-driven actions that create success for your company or business.

Capstone Project/ Application/ case study

How do top firms put data to work? In this module interns will learn how successful businesses use data to create cutting-edge, customer-focused marketing practices. They will explore real-world examples of the five-pronged attack to apply customer analytics to marketing, starting with data collection and data exploration, moving toward building predictive models and optimization, and continuing all the way to data-driven decisions. At the end of this, they will know the best way to put data to work in business, based on the most innovative and effective data-driven practices of today’s top firms.

- Technology Skills: an understanding of a wide range of tools like Python, R, Spark, Excel, SQL, SAS, Hadoop, MongoDB (NOSQL), Amazon AWS (EMR / EC2), QlikView and Tableau that are commonly used to extract, analyse and visualize data.

- Statistical Modeling and Analytical Skills: knowledge of statistics, data mining, machine learning and deep learning techniques and the ability to create predictive models.

- Applying analytics to business situations: a fair understanding of business functions like marketing, finance, operations, and the application of Analytics in verticals like BFSI, retail, telecom, Healthcare etc.
