Wetlands: Significance and Conservation

Dr. Abhishek Swami

Wetlands are areas where water covers the soil, or is present either at or near the surface of the soil all year or for varying periods of time during the year, including during the growing season. Water saturation (hydrology) largely determines how the soil develops and the types of plant and animal communities living in and on the soil. Wetlands may support both aquatic and terrestrial species. The prolonged presence of water creates conditions that favor the growth of characteristic wetland (hydric) soils.

Wetlands occur naturally on every continent. The main wetland types are swamp, marsh, bog, and fen; sub-types include mangrove forest, floodplains, mire, vernal pool, sink, and many others. Many peat lands are wetlands. The water in wetlands is either freshwater, brackish, or saltwater. Wetlands can be tidal (inundated by tides) or non-tidal. The largest wetlands include the Amazon River basin, the West Siberian Plain, the Pantanal in South America, and the Sundarbans in the Ganges-Brahmaputra delta. The UN Millennium Ecosystem Assessment determined that environmental degradation is more prominent within wetland systems than any other ecosystem on Earth.

Categories of Wetlands

Wetlands vary widely because of regional and local differences in soils, topography, climate, hydrology, water chemistry, vegetation and other factors, including human disturbance. Indeed, wetlands are found from the tundra to the tropics and on every continent except Antarctica. Two general categories of wetlands are recognized: coastal or tidal wetlands and inland or non-tidal wetlands.

Coastal/Tidal Wetlands

Coastal/tidal wetlands in the United States, as their name suggests, are found along the Atlantic, Pacific, Alaskan and Gulf coasts. They are closely linked to our nation’s estuaries where sea water mixes with fresh water to form an environment of varying salinities. The salt water and the fluctuating water levels (due to tidal action) combine to create a rather difficult environment for most plants. Consequently, many shallow coastal areas are un-vegetated mud flats or sand flats. Some plants, however, have successfully adapted to this environment. Certain grasses and grasslike plants that adapt to the saline conditions form the tidal salt marshes that are found along the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific coasts. Mangrove swamps, with salt-loving shrubs or trees, are common in tropical climates, such as in southern Florida and Puerto Rico.

TIPS TO OVERCOME EXAM STRESS AND ANXIETY

Nidhi Prasad

Exam season is right around the corner, which probably means that the notorious exam stress should be setting in right about… now?

As the notifications date comes near, the students should prepare well and start preparing the study. The Prime Minister of our Country has to maintain a balance between studying and checking the notifications. He should also make sure that the stress level of the students is maintained.

Keeping yourself completely stress-free is not a good idea. Do not avoid talking to your friends or meeting them once in a while. But, do so after you achieve your study targets regularly. Balancing relationships and studies is not a laughing matter, it requires dedication. Both call for your time and devotion to grow. A fine balance between enjoying this season and a study has to be struck.

Sometimes life forces us to put more weight on one thing than another. Often, this priority shift means forgoing one thing for another. Many times it can cause stress. Come to think of it that the problem has acquired such a monstrous shape that the Prime Minister of our Country has to...
WETLANDS ...

Rico. Some tidal freshwater wetlands form beyond the upper edges of tidal salt marshes where the influence of salt water ends. Inland-Non tidal Wetlands

Inland non-tidal wetlands are most common on floodplains along rivers and streams (riparian wetlands), in isolated depressions surrounded by sand dunes or floodplain lakes (for example, playas, basins and "potholes"), along the margins of lakes and ponds, and in other low-lying areas where the groundwater table is near the land surface or where precipitation sufficiently saturates the soil (vernal pools and bogs). Inland wetlands include marshes and wet meadows, dominated by herbaceous plants, swamps dominated by shrubs, and wooded swamps dominated by trees. Certain types of inland wetlands are common in particular regions of the country.

Many of these wetlands are seasonal (they are more or less ephemeral) and dry out completely during the dry season, particularly in the arid and semiarid West, may be wet only periodically. The quantity of water present and the timing of its presence in part determine the functions of a wetland and its role in the environment. Even wetlands that appear dry at times for significant parts of the year—such as small pools or ponds—often provide critical habitat for wildlife adapted to breeding exclusively in these areas.

Significance of Wetlands

Wetlands are considered to have unique ecological features which provide numerous products and services to humanity. Ecosystem goods provided by the wetlands mainly include - water for irrigation, fisheries, non-timber forest products, water supply and recreation.

The major services include carbon sequestration, flood control, groundwater recharge, nutrient removal, toxics retention and biodiversity maintenance.

• Agriculture and allied sectors: Wetlands such as tanks, ponds, lakes, and reservoirs have long been providing multiple-use water services which include water for irrigation, domestic needs, ground water recharge, etc.

• In terms of growth in fish production in India, wetlands play a significant role. Around 61 percent of the fish production in the country is from inland water bodies and it is also the second largest aquaculture farmed fish producer in the world.

• Carbon Sequestration: Swamps, mangroves, peat lands, mires and marshes play an important role in the carbon cycle. Wetland soils may contain as much as 200 times more carbon than its vegetation.

• In India, coastal wetlands are playing a major role in carbon sequestration. The total extent of coastal ecosystems (including mangroves) in India is around 43000 km.

• Overall, mangroves are able to sequester about 1.5 metric tons of carbon per hectare per year and the upper layers of mangrove sediments have high carbon content, with conservative estimates indicating the levels of 10 percent.

• Pollution Abatement: Wetlands act as a sink for contaminants in many agricultural and urban landscapes. In India too, wetlands are polluted through agricultural runoff and discharge of untreated sewage and other waste from urban areas.

• Flood Control: Wetlands play an important role in flood control. Wetlands help to lessen the impacts of flooding by absorbing water and reducing the speed at which flood waters drain away, they trap suspended solids and nutrient load.

• A large network of lakes and ponds in major cities like Srinagar, Bhopal, Bengaluru, Chennai and Hyderabad were constructed with the objective of flood control.

• Besides, the mangroves along the sea shores, especially on the western coast in West Bengal and Odisha have been playing a major role in protecting the coastal environment from the destruction of cyclones that frequent the emirate in the Bay of Bengal.

• Biodiversity Hotspots: Wetlands are important in supporting species diversity. Biodiversity hotspots provide important environment where photosynthesis can occur and where the recycling of nutrients can take place. Thus, they play a significant role in the support of food chains.

• In India, lakes, rivers and other freshwater bodies support large diversity of biota representing almost all taxonomic groups. For example, freshwater ecosystems of Western Ghats alone have 290 species of fish. Similarly, Loktak Lake is famous for being the only refuge of the endangered Sangesar (Manipur brow-antlered deer).

• Wetlands are also important breeding areas for domestic and migratory birds species in many such wetland areas of India, like Bharatpur wild life sanctuary in Rajasthan, and literature on the non-breeding birds. Areas of particular importance are the marshy wetlands and flooded marshes in the state of Kerala, the marshes and flooded wetlands in the state of Uttar Pradesh, and the marshy areas of coastal Bombay and the Sundarbans.

• Sarus cranes, black necked cranes, Gangetic river dolphins, the Indian mud turtle and numerous threatened species of birds and fauna, feed (off) and live in and around wetlands.

• As per an estimate, the approximate number of species of migratory birds recorded from India is between 1200 and 1300, which is about 24 percent of India’s total bird species.

• Tourism: Wetlands such as coral reefs, beaches, reservoirs, lakes and rivers are considered to be a significant part of the tourism experience in the country.

• As per an estimate, every year, around seven million tourist visit Kerala’s backwaters, beaches and wildlife sanctuaries, 3 million visit Uttarakhands’s lakes and other natural ponds and one million visit Dal lake in Jammu and Kashmir.

• Cultural Significance: Wetlands especially lakes and ponds (e.g. Pushkar lake in Rajasthan and Ramappa lake in Telangana) are intrinsically linked to the local culture. They are revered by the masses in recognition of the fact that they are the means of sustenance of their livelihood.

• Conservation of Wetland

Since the advent of industrialization and urbanization the wetlands came under severe threat due to increased anthropogenic pressures. As per an estimate, India has lost 38 percent of its wetlands between 1991 and 2001 alone.

• Urban and Land Use Changes: During the 90 year period from 1901 to 1991, the number of urban centers doubled while urban population has increased eightfold. This magnitude of growth exerted tremendous pressure on wetlands and flood plain areas for meeting water and food demand of growing population.

• For example, the Kanwar Lake in Bihar, Asia’s largest freshwater lake, was shrunken to one-third of its size due to encroachment, much like Jammu and Kashmir’s Dal Lake. And, about 3400 hectares of the wetland area of the Kolleru Lake (Andhra Pradesh) have been reclaimed for agriculture in recent years.

• Agricultural residues: As a result of intensification of agricultural activities over the past four decades, fertilizer consumption has increased from about 2.8 million tons in 1973-1974 to 28.3 million tons in 2010-2011.

• As per an estimate, 10-15 percent of the nutrients added to the soils through fertilizers eventually find their way to the surface water system. High nutrient contents stimulate algal growth, leading to eutrophication of surface water bodies.

• Municipal and Industrial pollution: Less than 31 percent of the domestic wastewater from Indian urban centers is treated. Around 80 percent in the developed world, which is largely discharged in the natural water bodies such as streams and rivers.

• For example, River Yamuna, which passes through 6 Indian States, receives about 1789 MLD of untreated waste water from the capital city of Delhi. This is about 78 percent of the total pollution load that flows in to the river every day.

• Similarly, untreated industrial effluents have become a major threat to the survival of wetlands. For instance, the Bellandur Lake in Bengaluru city was ‘on fire’ in May 2015

CANDIDATES ARE ADVISED NOT TO TAKE CONSCIOUS OF FAKE OFFER OF APPOINTMENT FOR JOB IN ISRO

1. U R Rao Satellite Centre (URSC) situated in Bengaluru of Karnataka State is the lead centre of ISRO for satellite technology. URSC is in the forefront of spacecraft technology towards conceptualization, design, development, fabrication, testing, launch and in-orbit management of spacecraft. As a sequel to its mandate of spacecraft development, the centre is engaged in development of cutting edge technologies of relevance to its activities and infrastructures set-up for design, development, fabrication and testing of spacecraft. Over a period of four decades, URSC has successfully established Indian National Satellite (INSAT) system, which is one of the largest domestic communication satellite systems in Asia-Pacific region and Indian Remote Sensing (IRS) system which is among the largest geostationary surveillance satellites in operation. Navigation with Indian Constellation (NAVIC) an independent Indian satellite based regional positioning system with a constellation of seven satellites for critical national applications will be operational shortly. Mars Orbiter Mission, Chandrayaan-I and Astrosat are some of the scientific and exploration missions which have garnered the attention internationally. The future missions being undertaken by URSC are highly challenging and provide opportunities to conduct research development of innovative technologies and establishment of the advanced infrastructure needed for space exploration and beyond.

7. Mode of Selection.

(a) Shortlisted Applications. Where the number of applications received is too large (for posts with requisite minimum qualification as per SRO) in proportion to the vacancies and it is not convenient or possible for the department to call all the candidates for the written test. Indian Navy at their discretion may restrict the number of eligible candidates whose applications are registered by shortlisting as per merit in the ratio 1:25 to the number of vacancies based on the marks obtained in the minimum requisite educational qualification specified at para 4 of this recruitment/advertisement. This practice does not automatically entitle a person/applicant to be called for the written test.

(b) Scheme of Written Examination. All short listed eligible candidates will have to appear in the written examination consisting of objective type questions based on the essential/desirable qualification as mentioned at para 4 above and bilingual in both English and Hindi (except for General English) covering aspects as below.

take out two hours from his busy schedule to speak to the school community emphasizing the need to stay stress-free for the sake of better performance. Herein lies a lesson for the Parents as well as the Teachers that the responsibility of helping our children lies with us, parents by realizing that they should not put the burden of their own aspirations on their children and Teachers should keep using the power of encouragement by constantly boosting the morale of their students.

Why Do People Experience Exam Stress?
- Worry they might fail
- Don’t feel prepared
- Don’t have much time to study
- Need to get an expected result
- Don’t think they will do well
- Find it hard to understand what they’re studying
- Feel pressure from family to get good marks
- Feel they need to compete with their classmates
- Have other things happening in their life

Things to Do

Studying for a test can be hard, especially if you’re distracted. Focusing on studying will make it easier, which means you’ll finish sooner. The key is to eliminate distractions and set yourself up in an ideal studying environment.

due to the discharge of effluents (especially nutrient rich flows) by the surrounding industries.
- Climate Change: In 2007, the UNESCO estimated that Global climate change is expected to become an important driver of loss and changes of wetland ecosystem. These findings are important for India which has been experiencing the flood-drought-flood cycle for the last 2 decades.
- As per a study, wetlands located in high altitude as well as coastal areas, like mangroves and coral reefs, are some of the most sensitive climates. Loss of wetlands can be affected by climate change.
- For example, climate change caused rise in level of Tsonomri Lake in Ladakh, a glacial fed high altitude lake, thereby causing submerged important breeding islands in the lake where endangered migratory birds like the Black-necked Crane and Bar-headed Goose would breed.
- As per an estimate, India will lose about 84 percent of coastal wetlands and 13 percent of mountain wetlands with climate change induced sea water rise of 1 meter.

Avoid junk food - it will bring you feeling worn-out.

Wetlands in India account for 4.7% of the total geographical area of the country.

These wetlands provide numerous ecosystem goods and services, but are under stress.

Reasons for wetlands loss in India are urbanization, land use changes and pollution.

There is no proper regulatory framework for conservation of wetlands in India.

Future research should focus on institutional factors influencing their condition.

Seeking to protect over 2 lakh wetlands across the country, the Centre has come out with rules to identify these ecologically fragile areas which play an important role in flood control, groundwater recharge, preserving plant varieties, supporting migratory birds and protecting coastlines. The new rules, notified by the environment ministry, decentralize wetlands management by giving states powers to regulate and notify wetlands within their jurisdictions but also keep a watch on prohibited activities.

In Senior Women's National Weightlifting Championships, Rakhi Halder of Bengal has bagged gold in the 64kg category of the 35th edition of the event in Kolkata. Though way short of her personal best, Halder lifted 93 kg in snatch and 117 kg in clean and jerk to clinch the gold medal. She was 10kg ahead of her nearest rival Harjinder Kaur of Chandigarh. Ranked 19th in the Olympic qualifiers list, Halder had produced a personal best of 218 kg at the Qatar International Cup last year to win the bronze medal. At the Commmonwealth Championship in June 2019, Halder who is also an Indian Railways employee had clinched the gold with a total lift of 214-kg.

Sports Authority of India (SAI) and Hockey India have announced the establishment of high Performance Centres in seven places across the country to provide state-of-the-art facilities to Junior and Sub-Junior players. The move is aimed at grooming young talent in view of 2024 and 2028 Olympic Games. While the National Hockey Academy at Dhyan Chand National Stadium, New Delhi along with SAI at Surindergarh, Bhopal and Bengaluru will be active within the next three months, the remaining three centres will be developed over the next one year. The remaining three High-Performance Hockey Centres will be established at SAI, Taekyl, Imphal in Manipur, Balewadi Sports Complex, Pune in Maharashtra, SAI Centre, Ranchi and Gomke Jaipal Singh Astroturf Hockey Stadium. The SAI Centre Bengaluru will remain as the main site for the senior and junior national teams.
