INDIA-USA TRADE AND ECONOMIC COOPERATION

Dr. S P Sharma and Ms. Bhawna Kakkar

India and USA are the world’s two largest democracies. Both the economies occupy a significant position in the world economy with a combined contribution of around 27% in the world GDP. Over the years, the two nations have played a crucial role in the promotion of world trade and prosperity; their collective share in world merchandise trade stands at around 13%. Bilateral relations between India and USA are based on increasing economic cooperation and shared democratic values. The two countries have common interests in promoting global economic prosperity through trade, investments, and connectivity. The two countries view one another as important strategic partners to promote peace and stability regionally and globally. Both the nations have been working together to provide a positive and forward-looking vision to the bilateral partnership.

Mutual visits at the leadership-level have been an integral part of the bilateral engagement between India and USA. Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi after assuming office in 2014 has visited USA on a number of occasions involving participation in high-level multilateral summits and also conclusion of bilateral engagements. During June 2017, our Prime Minister met the President of USA, Mr. Donald J. Trump and exchanged views in strategic areas such as defence, security, energy, among others.

Further, India and USA have more than 50 bilateral inter-governmental dialogue mechanisms in place for exchange of views on wide ranging areas. Many of such dialogue mechanisms are held at the Ministerial-level. Some of them are listed below:

High-Level Dialogue Mechanisms between India and USA

- India-USA 3+2 Ministerial Dialogue
- India-USA Commercial Dialogue
- India-USA Economic and Financial Partnership
- India-USA Trade Policy Forum

MAKING WORK PLACES SAFER FOR WOMEN

Dr. Sheetal Kapoor

8th March is a historic day as it is celebrated globally as ‘International Women’s Day’. This year the theme for International Women’s Day 2020 campaign is #Each for Equal. A gender equal world is an enabled world. It is a day which challenges stereotypes, fights biases, broadens perceptions, improve situations and celebrates women’s achievements. As collectively, each one of us can help to create a gender equal world.

In India despite all the talk about gender diversity and affirmative action, very few women are into leadership positions such as CEO’s, judges in recent times. Out of every 100 CEOs and managing directors of companies listed on the National Stock Exchange, only about three are women, and this has been the case since 2014. “The top talent in India is naturally skewed towards choosing men as CEOs and MDs. There are just 24, or 4.8%, women among CEOs of companies that made up the 2018 Fortune 500 list. Therefore, what is required is creating more job opportunities for women with flexible hours and creches within workplaces.

In this changing world and marketplace, every organisation understands the importance and advantage of having a diverse workforce supported by both men and women equally. Further making the workplaces safer for women can go a long way. Sexual Harassment (SH) is one of the biggest challenges faced by women at workplace Studies show that while fulfilling duties at workplace many individuals generally who are in power commit offences of sexual harassment believing that there will be no action taken against them. Although the working institutions have gone a long way in modernisation and development, the cases of sexual harassment continue. According to World Policy Analysis Centre nearly 235 million women Worldwide lack legal protection from sexual harassment at workplaces.

In India a research conducted in 2017 found that 70% of the cases of sexual harassment of women go unreported. Supreme Court in Vishakha case for the first time brought guidelines for ensuring a safe environment for women at workplace in India. The guidelines later helped to enact Prevention of Sexual Harassment (POSH) Act 2013. Sexual Harassment not only causes physical pain, but the victim goes through mental and emotional trauma.

Laws play an important role in ensuring the safety of women at workplace. Through laws a fear is being created in the minds of those who take to doing such heinous acts. Over the years what gave the wrong doers confidence was that no matter what they do the victim will not be able to report the same on account of shame and even losing their jobs. However, with social media and the power shown by ‘metoo’
My dear countrymen, I am fortunate to have got an opportunity once again to greet citizens from Kutch to Kohima, Kashmir to Kanyakumari; in fact across the length & breadth of the country. Namaskar to all of you. Reflecting on the expanse & diversity of our land, revering them fills each & every Indian with a sense of pride. And an opportunity to experience this varied diversity is one that touches the heart, filling it up with joy; it is a flower that radiates inspiration. A few days ago, at a small place at the Hunar Haat held in the premises of our country’s diverse expanse, cultures, traditions, cuisines & the warmth of emotions. As a matter of fact the repertoire comprising traditional attire, handicrafts, carpets, utensils, Bamboo & brass products, Prakriti of Punjab, exotic leatherwork of Andhra Pradesh, Bhadohi carpets, copper work of Kutch, a number of musical instruments & innumerable stories; the vivid mosaic of pan-Indian art & culture was truly unique. The stories of the artisans’ perseverance, zeal & love for their skill are equally inspiring as well. Listening to a diyang woman at the Hunar Haat was a delightful experience. I told her that earlier she used to sell paintings on the pavement. Her life changed after she connected with the Hunar Haat. Today, she is not only self-reliant; she has purchased a house too. At Hunar Haat, I got the opportunity to converse with many other artisans. I am told that over 50 per cent of the crafts persons participating at Hunar Haat are women. Also, during the last three years, through Hunar Haat, close to three lakh artisans & crafts persons have gained many opportunities of employment. Hunar Haat, of course, is a platform showcasing art & craft; it is also lending wings to people’s dreams. It is a venue where it is impossible to overlook the country’s diversity. Besides handicrafts, it displays the diversity of India’s varied cuisine too. In a single row, one could savour the sight of Idli-Dosa, Chhole- Bhature, Daal- Baat, Khaman- Khandvi & what not! I thoroughly enjoyed having the delicious Little Chokha of Bihar. All over India, fairs & exhibitions such as this are organized from time to time.

However, the opportunity arises, one should attend such events to know India’s diversity. Thus, not only would you be able to be a part of the country’s art-culture canvas; you will also contribute in the progress & prosperity of hardworking crafts persons, especially women. Do know India, to experience India. My dear countrymen, our country is bestowed with great traditions. The legacy that we inherited from our ancestors, the knowledge & values that have permeated entail compassion toward each & every living being & boundless love for nature. All this is a part of our cultural heritage. And to partake of this culture of hospitality in the Indian ethos, every year, numerous species of birds fly from across the world come to India. Throughout the year, India is home to migratory species. We are told that more than 500 varieties of birds fly in from varied regions. Recently, Gandhinagar was host to the COP-13 convention, where this phenomenon was deliberated. India’s efforts concerning the subject were lauded too. Friends, it is a matter of pride for me that in the last three years, India will chair the COP convention on migratory species. Do send in your suggestions on lending more support to this opportunity, and do write in to ISRO’s website. I am told that many interested persons are arranging tour for their students to show them rocket launching & motivate the students to become scientists & teachers of all schools that they should avail of this benefit in times to come.

Friends, I would like to convey to you another exciting piece of information. I’d read the comment of Paras from Ranchi, Jharkhand on Namo App. Paras wants me to tell our young friends about ISRO’s ‘Yuvika’ programme. ‘Yuvika’ is a commendable effort on part of ISRO to integrate the youth with science. This programme was launched for school students in the year 2019. ‘Yuvika’ is an acronym for ‘Yuvaa Vignay Kanyakam’ and this program is in consonance with our vision, “Jai Jawan, Jai Kisan, Jai Vigyan, Jai Anusandhan”. In this programme, students, after their exams, during their holidays, visit different centres of ISRO and learn about Space Technology, Space Science and Space Applications. If you want to know how training is imparted, what its nuances are, how exciting it is, then you must read the blogs of those students who have attended its earlier sessions. If you wish to be a participant of this wonderful training, you can register by visiting the website of ‘Yuvika’ linked to that of ISRO. My young friends, I’m telling you the name of the website which is written down, and must visit today itself. It is - www.yuvika.isro.gov.in. Have a good day.

My dear countrymen, the beautiful valleys of Ladakh witnessed a momentous event on 21st February 2020. The 1st ever flight of YS-117A aircraft as part of the UAS (Unmanned Aircraft System) testing programme launched from Leh’s Kushok Bakula Rimpochhe Airport. A mixture of 10% Indian Bio-jet fuel was used in the engine of this aircraft. The flight was a significant milestone in India’s journey towards becoming a self-reliant country in the field of aviation.

More about the flight:
- The aircraft used in the flight was YS-117A, a twin-turboprop aircraft.
- The flight was conducted from Leh’s Kushok Bakula Rimpochhe Airport in Ladakh.
- A mixture of 10% Indian Bio-jet fuel was used in the engine of the aircraft.
- This was the first ever flight of YS-117A with bio-jet fuel, marking a significant step towards reducing the dependency on imported aviation fuels.
- The flight was a joint effort between the Indian Air Force (IAF) and the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO).

This news demonstrates India’s commitment to developing indigenous technologies and reducing its carbon footprint. It signifies a shift towards sustainable aviation, aligning with the country’s overall vision of becoming a self-reliant economy.

movement now, it is clear that unlike earlier time's women now have a platform to share their issues. Hence along with this if strict laws and punishment for wrong doers is put in place no one would ever think of doing such acts at workplace.

In India, stricter laws regarding sexual harassment came after the harrowing Nirbhaya rape case in 2012. This case was also was a wakeup call for the nation in realising that although many laws are in place, there is no fear amongst them and many culprits are confident of getting away in sexual harassment cases due to loopholes in the system. Hence a need arises to review India's sexual harassment laws from time to time to ensure the wrong doers don’t escape so easily. Lack of awareness amongst doers don't escape so easily.

Lack of awareness amongst victims, poor implementation and strict compliance can ensure that no woman becomes victim of sexual harassment in given situations.

Laws in India to Make Workplaces Safer For women

• The judgement of Supreme Court of India on "Vishakha Vs Government of Rajasthan & Ors" was the stepping stone towards ensuring a safe working environment, free from sexual harassment for all employees at the workplace. For the first time Supreme Court acknowledge the gravity of sexual harassment of women and laid down guidelines mandatory for employer to prevent sexual harassment know as "Vishakha Guidelines 1997". The Vishakha Guidelines are based on Bhanwar Devi case. She was employed by state of Rajasthan as a "Sathin" a change agent working towards prevention of child marriages. While doing her job she prevented the marriage of one year old girl but she faced resentment and harassment from the community. Even after report of such incident no action was taken by local authority and later she was gang raped. This incident revealed the issues and challenges faced by women at workplace and the severe consequences where no action was taken against the culprit. Based on this case a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) was filed with Supreme Court by Vishakha and other women groups against the State of Rajasthan and Union of India. The SC proposed sexual harassment be recognised as violation of fundamental rights under article 14, 15, 19(g) of constitution right to equality and article 21 right to life and live with dignity. Before 1997 there was a continuous pressure from international organisation on India to enact and enforce law to ensure the safety of women and no violation of human right (Right to life and live with dignity under article 21 article and right to equality under article 14 & 15). India has also signed Convention on elimination of all forms of discrimination against women (CEDAW) on 30th July 1980 and later ratified it on 9 July 1993. Since there was no domestic law in India, there was an international obligation to ensure safe working environment.

• Passing of the most benevolent legislature ie ‘The Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act’, 2013 on 9th December. The POSH Act's scope extends to public & private places including schools, colleges and it covers the transportation taken and places visited during the course of employment.

• In India the POSH Act 2013 requires every organisation with employee more than 10 to constitute a committee known as internal committee in each and every administrative units, branches and offices. At least 50% of total nominated member shall be women. It is important to have maximum women representation in such committees so that women can raise their voice more strongly. If the number of workers is less than 10 or if the complaint is against the employer himself then the acts provides provision to constitute Local Committee by district officer at district and block levels.

• In India, the Employer or District Officer is responsible for prevention, prohibition and constitution of redressal mechanism. Many a time laws fail to redress the issue in reasonable time period. The Act ensures fast enquiry and judgement as the employee need to complain within 3 months and the committee needs to complete the investigation within 90 days and send the report to District office, who have to take action within 60 days.

Other International Laws and Policies for Addressing Sexual Harassment in The Workplace are:

a) The Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) was adopted in 1979. CEDAW directs all parties to take effective measures to end discrimination and to ensure safe working environment.

b) United Nation General Assembly Resolution 48/104 on the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women. Even after adoption of CEDAW violence on basis of gender specially against women remains a continuous problem, as a result the General Assembly issued resolution to ensure world free of gender based violence on 20th December 1993.

c) UNITE to End Violence against Women: Launched in 2008, it aims to raise awareness to public and increase the resource dedication and policy making to curb/stop the violence against women and girls across the nations.

d) The ILO Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations (CEACR) which is an independent body composed of 20 outstanding legal experts has confirmed that sexual harassment is a form of sex discrimination under Discrimination (Employment and Occupation) Convention (No. 111) of 1958. The ILO’s Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention (No. 169) also specifically prohibits sexual harassment in the workplace.

Conclusion: The need of the hour is to have gender balance at workplace and every employee in the organisation needs to be sensitised about the various laws which are existing in India to protect women. It should be mandatory for organisations to create policies for zero tolerance of sexual harassment at workplace. For easy approach and accessibility the details of ICC and its members must be shared with all employees. Further, women need to be proactive and come forward themselves to tackle issues of gender inequality and sexual harassment at workplaces.

The above list is indicative and not in any particular order. Those looking for overseas education, depending on their preference, may complete their masters in operations management from any well-known university in United States of America, United Kingdom or any other developed country. Few options in USA are- Arizona State University, Maryland University, Missouri State University, University of Texas, University of California, University of Colorado, University of Texas at Dallas etc. Indicative list of universities in UK include University of Chester, Swansea University, University of Lincoln, University of Birmingham, University of Bradford, University of Huddersfield, Glasgow Caledonian University.

Since foreign education costs a lot, it will be a better to do career benefit analysis, learn about scholarships and work opportunities which may subsidise your cost.

Career prospects and opportunities

There is a strong state of economy and employment opportunities for operations managers. In a vibrant economy where there is industrial boom, with high demand and consumption, the requirement for operations people would be more. Given below are certain roles/work areas that are available for people qualified in operations management.

Inventory Management: Inventory, that is material required for production/ construction has a cost. In addition to the cost, there is the cost of storage, interest and other costs. In order to maximise profit, incurring unnecessary costs must be avoided at all levels. Inventory costs can be minimised by keeping optimum inventory which is taken care of by the inventory management. Just-in-Time Institute, MANIPUR magnet management originated in Japan has been adopted by Indian companies also. As an inventory manager you will work with such methods.

Supply Chain Management: Known better by the acronym SCM, Supply chain management deals with the movement of goods and services. Any production or service activity needs to have a sequence. Supply chain managers try to formulate/ identify the most efficient sequence which can save time and money. Supplies are also related to the time and distribution on the other. The manager here may be involved in purchase of required items in time, make them reach to the production site. When the output is ready, the next step would be to put it into distribution line. The success of a supply chain manager is measured in terms of the length of this cycle. Smaller cycles are considered better.

Logistics Management: In broad terms logistics management is a function of supply chain management intended to meet customer requirements through the stages of planning, implementing and controlling the movement and placement of goods and services from starting point to destination. Proper logistics management contributes in saving time, money and improvement in customer service. Logistics Managers are required to coordinate with various intermediaries viz. suppliers, distribution agents etc. to achieve this.

Production Management: Working of the production facility determines the business success (or failure) of the efforts till the production stage. For production facility to work in a proper way, a number of factors have to be taken care of. This includes availability of skilled labours and supervising staff, raw material, machinery power and of course disposal of finished goods and wastages. A production manager has to do a lot of coordination to ensure that all these requirements are met and qualitative goods/products at desired speed in planned production.

In addition to the above various other job roles such as Purchase manager, Plant manager, Services Support manager, Materials manager, Channel manager, Warehouse manager. Quality Control manager are available to operation managers and/ or certifications. For example a course in Supply Chain Management or SAP can be undertaken. For working professionals online courses/certifications may come handy.

For those interested to work with IT applications, a qualification in SAP may take them to an operations management career. SAP – an acronym for Systems, Applications and Products (in Data Processing), was developed in Germany, offers extensive help in Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP). It is programmed to integrate different activities/functions in an industry like production, transportation, warehouse and supply. If you’re going to join SAP course, choose your institute carefully, which offers quality, recognised training with reasonable fee.

A good qualification in E-commerce/Business can also be used for a career in operations management.

Where to work

You’re ready with your qualification in operations management. Where you get to work becomes the next question. Any medium or large industry involved in production/ manufacturing/exploration/ building will have the need for operations professionals. Considering this a list of potential employers include- Construction and Real Estate companies, Printing and publishing industry. Facility management, Healthcare (including hospitals and drug manufacturers). Petroleum & gas industry, Automobile (Car/Truck/ Motorbikes/Scooter/ Three wheeler/Bicycle) manufacturing plants, Milk and dairy production units, Steel and other metal plants, Railways, Airlines, Shipping industry/Ports, Hotels, Paint and Chemicals manufacturers, Energy including green and renewable energy companies. Thus every big manufacturing industry will need operations managers. But the jobs are not limited to just manufacturing companies. Many other service providers need operation people. For example in last week of December 2019. Public sector company Balmer Lawrie is a big player in the area of logistics. There are a few companies in private sector expanding work in operations and logistics.

Teaching opportunities are also available at engineering/management colleges/universities.

The outcomes of these visits have been instrumental in further strengthening the multifaceted ties between the two countries. Apart from the visits at the leadership-level, there have been other significant engagements in the recent years at the senior officials level.

In September 2019, our Prime Minister visited USA for a series of high-level events and interactive sessions with the Indian-American community and the CEOs of leading energy companies in USA. He addressed over fifty thousand people at the "Howdy Modi" event in Houston, Texas and was joined by the US President. The energy and the enthusiasm at the event reflected the increasing synergy between India and USA.

Recently, a new dimension has been added in the bilateral relations between the two economies by way of landmark maiden visit of the US President, Mr. Donald Trump to India. India warmly welcomed the US president and his delegation with tremendous vigour. The US President arrived in Ahmedabad, Gujarat where he addressed more than 1,00,000 people at the "Namaste Trump" Event at the Motera Stadium. The event was highly extravagant and full of euphoria and indicated a far greater and closer India-USA partnership. The US President also visited the Sabarmati Ashram in Ahmedabad and the Taj Mahal in Agra. Later on, he arrived in New Delhi and held wide-ranging discussions with our Honourable Prime Minister on various national and international issues.

The two leaders announced a series of measures to increase economic cooperation between the two countries including major defence deals, agreements on healthcare and energy sectors and onset of negotiations for a mega trade deal. The two nations also discussed at length about the upcoming 5G technology and the need for the emerging technology to be a tool for freedom, progress and prosperity.

In terms of investments, USA is the 6th largest foreign investor in India with cumulative Foreign Direct Investments (FDI) equity inflows of close to USD 28 billion from April 2000 to June 2019. FDI equity inflows in India from USA stand at USD 3 billion during 2018-19. Given the huge size of the Indian market, there are several major US companies operating in India in sectors including manufacturing, agriculture, IT, retail, among others while major Indian companies in USA include Reliance, HCL Technologies, Infosys, TCS, Wipro, among others. Going ahead, India’s continued improvement in the Ease of Doing Business rankings and the recent cut in corporate tax will attract large chunk of investments from USA considering the growing interest of American businesses in the Indian economy.

Hence, the India-USA bilateral cooperation is broad-based and multidimensional, covering trade and investments, defence and security, education, science & technology, cyber security, high-tech, civil nuclear energy, agriculture, health, among others. One of the most important foundations of this special partnership between India and USA are the people-to-people relations. The Indian Diaspora in the US (estimated at around 4 million) has been the biggest contributor to the growth and development of the US economy leading to successful bilateral relations over the years.

Conclusions

India-USA bilateral relations today not only encompass the major pillars of their strategic partnership but have deepened with greater bilateral economic engagement and ever increasing people-to-people contacts. In the last few years, the bilateral relations have expanded into a global partnership with greater convergence of views in wide ranging areas and shared approach towards a rules-based order in the Indo-Pacific region.

The visit of the US President, Mr. Trump to India has been eagerly awaited by businessmen, academicians and thought leaders to lay the foundation for greater trade ties between the two economies. The thrust of the bilateral discussions has been on building the economic and energy ties along with an alignment of mutual strategic interests.
