EMERGING OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUTH IN MEDIA AND ENTERTAINMENT SECTOR

Mohit Soni

The Media and Entertainment (M&E) industry has yet again proven to be the sunrise sector for the economy and is expected to post a 33 percent growth by FY22. The sector has been one of the least impacted during the pandemic and while traditional outdoor entertainment formats did observe a dip, the current crisis boosted the growth of OTT, digital advertising and gaming.

While on one side, movie theatres, theme parks, museums and other external consumption models suffered due to enforced lockdown, on the other hand digital and OTT video formats registered a growth of 26 percent in the current financial year. The determination of the people in the industry and the quick adoption of innovative technology led to digital integration during this global calamity. Technological interventions also led to uninterrupted consumption of media and entertainment formats by consumers during the lockdown, not just in India but globally.

According to a KPMG report titled ‘A year off script: Time for resilience’, M&E industry is expected to reach a revenue of INR 1, 86,600 crore (US$ 25.32 billion) by financial year 2022 because of the quick acceleration in the digital era. This has also given a rise in demand for artists and experts, making the M&E industry one of the most aspirational sectors for today’s youth, where they can enhance their creativity and also have a sense of security. The KPMG report also states that digital advertising spends are likely to overtake TV advertising in FY21.

In the present times, students are aspiring for industry-led courses, which ensure that their passion doesn’t wither with time and they continue to grow into better professionals. Being creative is the need of the hour and when we talk about M&E industry, it provides the opportunity to build creative champions for the development of M&E ecosystem.

CAREER PROSPECTS IN THE AREA OF HR

Arti S

Career opportunities keep varying, but there are few roles which are in regular demand. One such role is that of a Human Resources (HR) professional.

Business enterprises or industries may be similar in every respect, at the same location with equal investment and similar technology and machinery. But it can’t be guaranteed that each of them will produce similar results. Because there is a human factor and these people can’t be automated or mechanised like machines. Even if these people in different units are in the same age group and with same qualifications, it is not going to standardize the result as people differ in their motivation, engagement level and attitude. Contribution of this factor can’t be neglected in the functioning of an enterprise. Other things being equal, an organization with better equipped HR, will produce better results. This is the power of HR.

Thus HR is an important component of every organization. To manage and take care of this HR, you also need HR and here comes the role of Human Resource Development and Management.

The term Human Resource Management has been in existence since many decades. Development was added to it a bit late. Today’s HR education covers both Development and Management. However a number of experts believe that, the time has come to split HR into administrative and developmental. As you navigate through this article, you’ll understand what both these mean.

The area of HR can be considered as a career, particularly by those who believe in this people power and are keen to leverage this power. Making a career in HR is simple and entry barriers are few.

Functions of HR

The focus of HR is on people and HR deals with various aspects related with people who are called employees in reference to organizations. With time, so many developments have taken place in HR practices and accordingly HR functions now include the following-

Finding the right fit: Organizations need people for specific roles and have to be very careful that only people matching these roles are taken. Recruitment and selection are primary functions of HR which are of utmost importance. Advertising positions (in newspapers/magazines/on social media platforms etc.), inviting applications, shortlisting applicants and conducting the selection process are major steps involved in this function. It is a huge exercise, particularly in our country where usually the number of applicants is much more than the positions available.

Placement and promotion: When a large number of people are selected, their proper placement is a daunting task. From time to time moving people from a place/postion to other may also be a requirement. Conducting promotion

People leave but organizations want to make their presence felt in social media which now forms a major component of employer branding. However employer branding doesn’t mean just that. Through external and internal communication, organizations want to project themselves as employer of choice or preferred employer.

The strategies for this have to be adopted both online and offline. Intranet in an organization is also meant to contribute towards that.

Compensation and rewards: A job offer is evaluated on many parameters of which one is compensation and rewards. Under this the challenge is to decide compensation structure for employees at different levels. In government and public sector things are standardized and fixed to a large extent. Private sector usually adapts flexibility in such matters and has come with concepts like variable pay, performance appraisal etc. So two employees joining together for similar roles, may be offered different compensation structure. Salary negotiation, deciding joining bonus, increments, rewards, performance bonus etc. comes under this function.

Learning and development: Learning and development comes under capacity building. Organizations recruit freshers and experienced people both. Freshers, in most cases, need to be provided extensive training to understand the organizational systems and processes as well as its working. Training programmes are also conducted to develop managerial and leadership skills. Most of the big organizations have their own in-house training facilities. However in many cases employees are nominated to external training programmes also. Coaching, mentoring is also covered under learning and development function.

More and more organizations are now going for e-learning, mobile learning and experiential learning.

People analytics: People or HR analytics is relatively a new function and is drawing a lot of interest. Under this function HR data is put to optimum use to observe trends, generate meaningful information and make valuable predictions. Various programmes and software help in this function. Analytics in HR may be used to foresee attrition, assess future manpower requirements and decide best combinations of skills, qualifications and talent for a particular role. People analytics takes help of data science.

Requirements for a career in HR
To make a proper career in HR, you need to have a good education qualification in this area. However those with graduation in management [Bachelors in Business Studies (BMS)/Administration (BBA)] may get employed in HR firms/ recruitment agencies in junior roles. As regards postgraduation, any of the following qualifications can be of use—MBA/MMs with specialization in HR Postgraduate Diploma in Management with specialization in HR Master of Human Resource Development/Management Master of Social Work (MSW) M.A. in Personal Management and Industrial Relations M.A. in Industrial Psychology Graduates from any discipline are usually allowed to enrol for above courses. However eligibility criteria and selection process may vary from institute to institute and from course to course. For most of these, selection is based on performance in a management entrance test, group discussion and personal interview. The duration of the course is two years. One year diploma courses doesn’t carry as much value as two year full time course. Government departments, public sector organizations/banks/insurance companies don’t accept a course of less than two years. List of institutes offering the above courses is not given here for the simple reason that every university/ university having a department/faculty of management studies provide one or more of the above courses. It is your choice if you want to pursue your studies from a nearby institute or willing to do it from any good institute anywhere.

Apart from IIMs, Xavier Labour Relations Institute, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Faculty of Management Studies, University of Delhi are well known names for pursuing a course in HR. For government / private sector jobs all UGC/AICTE recognised degree are accepted.

Those interested to enter the training domain may consider enrolling for Diploma in Training and Development from the Indian Society for Training and Development, New Delhi. In few cases a degree in law adds value for a career in HR Programme.

Work opportunities
There are many ways in which working in HR can be looked at. You may work in an organization to manage its HR. Every organization has a Human Resource department, you may work in some HR firm or further the cause of HR through teaching or training etc.

Public sector: All public sector organizations in the business of power, petroleum, gas, steel, banking, insurance, tourism, finance, electricity etc. employ freshers and experienced people for their HR function. One set of public sector companies recruit HR freshers as management/executive trainees. Now few PSUs shortlist applicants on the basis of their UGC-NET score. In the final year of your HR course, you may consider appearing in UGC-NET to apply for these PSUs.

Private sector: A large number of big private companies in India are involved in service and manufacturing etc. Banks, insurance, mutual fund, travel, fast moving consumer goods, information technology, e-commerce, automobile, hospitality are some examples.

Recruitment agencies:
There are small, medium and large agencies involved in recruitment. As a matter of fact, a large number of HR freshers begin their career by getting employed in these recruitment agencies which may differ in their specializations. Some deal with technical manpower, some
