NEW LABOUR CODES FOR NEW INDIA

Rishikesh Kumar

The two houses of Parliament has approved three labour codes subsuming 25 central labour laws, affecting a major reform that has been on the table for at least 17 years. The three codes on social security, industrial relations and occupational safety will now offer industries flexibility in doing business, hiring and firing, make/investors' strikes difficult while promoting fixed term employment, reducing influence of trade unions and expanding social security net for informal sector workers. The codification has made labour laws in sync with the emerging economic scenarios; reduce the complexity by providing uniform definitions and reduction in multiple authorities under various Acts and bring transparency and accountability in enforcement of labour laws. This in turn would lead to ease of compliance, rationalizing the setting up of manufacturing units including boosting Labour Intensive Industries such as agriculture and manufacturing exports. This would lead to enhancement in employment opportunities as well as its formalization along with ensuring safety, social security and welfare of workers. Along with the Wage Code, passed in August 2019, India will now have four Labour codes reducing compliance hasses, and streamlining laws - which have been the demands of industries for decades.

The Four Labour Codes

- Wage Code
- Industrial Relations (IR) Code
- Code on Occupational Safety, Health and Working Conditions (OS&I)

Social Security Code

- Name of the Code: Social Security Code
- Number & name of amalgamated laws

IR Code

- Name of the Code: IR Code
- 3 Laws -
  - (i) The Trade Unions Act, 1926
  - (ii) The Industrial Employment (Standing orders) Act, 1946
  - (iii) The Industrial Disputes Act, 1947

OS&I Code

- Name of the Code: OS&I Code
- 13 Laws -
  - (i) The Factories Act, 1948
  - (ii) The Plantations Labour Act, 1951
  - (iii) The Mines Act, 1953
  - (iv) The Working Journalists and other Newspaper Employees (Conditions of Service) and Miscellaneous Provisions Act, 1956

DEFINE YOUR INTERESTS TO MAKE BETTER CAREER CHOICES

Vijay Prakash Srivastava

All young people are concerned about their future and much of their worry is centered on job and career. The most obvious thing about future is that it is uncertain. We've all seen it, we can only think about it. However with proper planning and preparations, we can minimize risks and create a better future for us. This is something every one of us should do.

The world is a dynamic place and changes keep taking place all over and everywhere. The career scenario has also changed. There is more variety in career choices, more people are ready to change their jobs. If not happy with the present one. Earlier it was not like this, it was quite common to see people spending their entire work life with in a single job or with the same employer.

Young people should be in readiness to make best of the available opportunities, though challenges would always be there. A career which is aligned with your living, passion and interest will be more satisfying for you. Employers look for people who enjoy their work and carry it out with passion. There may be different criterion to choose a course and career.

Choosing the Right Career?

You should see, if there is a course related to your real interest and whether it may lead to a meaningful career. The process may appear to be difficult, but the efforts you make for this exploration may be worthwhile. This article is intended to help you in the process.

Human thinking knows no boundaries, such human interests can also be varied and enduring and there may not be courses and career related to every particular interest. In that case you may look at the closest option. You'll also be required to relate your interest with your aptitude and mindset.

Those who like to explore and understand why things happen, how these have evolved and have a questing attitude may go well in science. Again, science is a vast subject with large number of branches, so you will be required to check which branch interests you more. We'll know about physics, chemistry, ecology and botany. But these are further divided into subjects like geophysical, biochemistry, quantum physics etc. which may offer you further choices. You may, after your 10+2, go for a B.Sc. course followed by M.Sc. in the chosen branch. A science degree may be pursued at a nearby college or university.

For postgraduate and higher studies you're the option of joining Indian Institute of Science, Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) and other prestigious institutions.

Medical science is also a dimension of science and an extensive one. If you find interest in human physiology, bodily processes and treating human disorders etc, then you may consider MBBS which is an undergraduate qualification in medicine and surgery. At postgraduate level you may decide to choose from MD and MS which relate to medicine and...

surgery respectively. BDS and MDS are other options. Subspeciality (like in Neurology) is also possible to develop expertise in a particular branch. If you want you may go for qualifications like BAMS Ayurvedic, BHMS Homeopathy etc. If you have animals and care for them, your interest may take you to qualifications like B.V.Sc. and M.V.Sc. Courses in physiotherapy, pharmacists and pathology are among other options.

Now the number of students rush to engineering courses, but not all of them prove to be successful engineers. Engineering is good for those who like to work with diagrams, charts, shapes and sizes. If you have some imagination and curiosity about technology, then engineering and technology have many branches like mechanical, electrical, civil, electronics, automobile etc. Though most of the students prefer technology courses in engineering with a duration of four years, after their 10+2, another route is to join a three years diploma course after SSC, also is possible. After completing this diploma, direct admission to 2nd year of university is possible. Diploma courses are usually offered at polytechnics while engineering can be studied at IITs, National Institute of Technology (NIT), Regional Colleges of Engineering and private engineering colleges and specialized institutions like Institute of Chemical Technology, Mumbai; Central Institute of Plastics Engineering and Technology, Universal etc.

If you’re more into computers, consider information technology for your study and career. The subject is divided into hardware software with further diversification in programming, networking, software development, hardware testing, game animation, database management, virus protection etc. Relevant courses are Bachelor of Computer Application (BCA/MCA), B.Com./B.Sc. in computer science and engineering degree diploma in electronics/ communication/software engineering etc.

Some of you may be keen to enter into the field of psychology, and in particular, forensic psychology. Psychology can prove to be a fit subject. Undergraduate laws, you may choose a psychology major and after that, you may opt for a Master’s degree. A number of specializations are available under psychology like clinical psychology, industrial psychology, developmental psychology with law others. Masters in industrial psychology is also available as an exclusive course.

For those who are outgoing, highly extrovert and like to meet and mix with people and like to work as a psychologist. The disciplines are not interrelated. For a good career in marketing management, courses in Business Administration with specialization in this subject is appropriate qualification which can be undertaken after graduation in any discipline. However, at undergraduate level, one may opt for Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA).

Diploma and postgraduate courses in journalism, mass communication and public relations. Such courses are part of curriculum at different universities. In India, the M. Com. is a very good course which can be undertaken after graduation in any discipline. However, at undergraduate level, one may opt for Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA).

Economics is an important subject under humanities. Those who are interested in various aspects of social, economic and developmental issues and things like supply and demand, may well to study economics and explore work opportunities in it. Economics has two broad branches mathematical and macroeconomics. At higher level you may enter into a particular branch of economics like financial, labour, international, behavioral economics etc. Indian Institute of Management, Calcutta, Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad, Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore etc. have their own civil service examination which is an excellent route to finance and accountancy, cost accountant, management accountancy and management consultancy. A police officer job also involves investigation. One may try for the Union Civil Services Examination which encompasses Indian Police Service. The good thing is that all graduates are eligible to appear in this Civil Services Examination.

Civil Services are also for those who have a love for power and authority. However, one should remember that officers belonging to these services have to follow many rules, be under discipline and exercise their power with caution. It is not an absolute power that is given to service. Civil Services Examination requires comprehensive study of general studies and prepare intensely in order to win. One has to choose. State government have their own civil services examination which is an excellent route to finance and accountancy, cost accountant, management accountancy and management consultancy. A police officer job also involves investigation. One may try for the Union Civil Services Examination which encompasses Indian Police Service. The good thing is that all graduates are eligible to appear in this Civil Services Examination.

Key Features of Industrial Relations Code
- Provision for being Council of one member in the Industrial Tribunal. In case of absence of one member, work can still be undertaken smoothly.
- Provision for taking the matter straight to the Tribunal in case of disputes not resolved at conciliation stage. At present, it is referred to the Tribunal by the appropriate Government.
- Implementation of award in 30 days after Tribunal award.
- After recognition of Fixed Term Employment, workers will get the option of Fixed Term Employment instead of contract labour. Under this, they would get benefits of hours of work, salary, social security and other welfare benefits like a Regular Employee.
- With the objective of better and effective participation of Trade Unions, a provision for "Negotiating Union" and "bargaining Counsil" has been made for undertaking negotiation on any dispute. With concerning of this recognition, recruiting disputes through dialogue would be facilitated and workers would be better able to get their rights.
- Arrangement for going to Tribunal has been made for resolving disputes arising between Trade Unions. The time would be required to resolve their disputes.
- Provision has been made for giving recognition to Trade Unions at Central and State level. This recognition has been given in the labour laws for the first time and after this recognition, Trade Unions would be able to make more effectively and more effectively at the Central and State level.
- Provision for Re-Engaging Fund has been made in the law for the first time. It aims to be a relief to those workers who had been fired from their jobs so that they are easily able to get employment again. For this, workers would be given 15 days salary within a period of 45 days.

Key Features of OSH Code
- Free health checkup once a year by the employer for workers which are more than a certain age.
- Legal right for getting an appointment letter given to workers for the first time.
- Cine Workers have been designated as Audio Visual Worker, so that more and more workers get covered under the OSH code. Earlier, this security was being given to actors working in films only.
- Key Features of Social Security Code
- The facility of ESIC would now be provided in all 740 districts. At present, this facility is being given in 650 districts only.
- Establishments working in hazardous sectors would mandatorily be linked with ESIC, even if there is only one worker working in it.
- Provision for making schemes for linking unorganised sector and gig workers with ESIC.
- Option to link workers working in plantation to plantation owners.
- Option for becoming member of ESIC is also being given to establishments with less than 10 workers.
- EPFO's coverage would be applicable on all establishments having 20 workers. At present, it was applicable only on establishments included in the schedule.
- Option to join EPFO is also being given to establishments having less than 20 workers.
- Schemes would be formulated for bringing workers coming under the category of "Self-employed" or falling under any other category under the ambit of EPFO.
- Provision has been made to formulate various schemes for providing comprehensive social security to workers in unorganised sector. A "Social Security Fund" will be created on the financial side in order to implement these schemes.
- Work to bring newer forms of employment created with the charging technology like "platform worker or gig worker" into the ambit of social security has been done in the Social Security Code. India is one of the few countries where this unorganized segment is brought into the category under social security has been taken.
- Provision for Gratuity has been made for Fixed Term Employees and there would not be any provision to minimum service period for this. For the first time, a Fixed Term Employee working for a determined period on contract has been given the right of social security like a Regular Employee.
- With the aim of making a national database for unorganised sector workers, registration of all these workers would be done on an online portal and this registration would be done on the basis of Self Certification through a simple procedure. It would facilitate the implementation of various social security schemes to beneficiaries in the unorganised sector. We can say that we would be able to get "Targeted Delivery" of social security done to unorganised sector workers with the help of this database.
- The most important thing for getting employment is the information about job vacancies. With this, it has been made mandatory for all establishments with 26 or more workers to report the vacancy position in their establishments. This information would be given on an online portal.

The Need for New Codes
The historic codes aiming for sea changes in social security, industrial relations, and occupational safety of workers have come at a time when India is aiming to attract more inflows from firms to become part of the global supply chain. The recent recommendations from the 2nd National Commission on Labour (NCL) and NCL's government to bring transparency and uniformity in definitions and approaches.

NEW LABOUR CODES...

Meanwhile, the business units having investment of foreign firms are barred from offering statutory benefits to their workers. The labour department has also announced a new Labour Code which provides greater freedom to workers in creating wage scales and salary structures. The policy enforces provisions from the state-run Vietcombank General Confederation of Labour to operate independent trade unions from any business unit. A UN report published earlier this year confirmed the increase in availability of jobs in Bangladesh supported the government schemes that have turned out 19 million people from poverty between 2014 and 2019. It also improved the health and educational status of the country.

In the Industrial Relations Code, 2020, the Indian government has introduced new conditions for carrying out strikes in factories such as no one can, in all the industrial establishments, go on strike without a 48-hour notice and during the period of proceedings before a Tribunal or a National Industrial Tribunal and sixty days after the conclusion of such proceedings. Besides, the code also allows companies having 300 workers to decide on their own about strikes, mergers, or other matters without involving the government. The government claims that increasing the threshold limit will create more jobs as a similar trend was witnessed in Rajasthan due to flexibility in the employers in hiring without additional burden on finance of the company which assures due to mandatory compliance with state laws. Though opposition parties in India claim that these changes will allow firms to exploit the workers with arbitrary service conditions, it is worth mentioning that as many as 16 states have already arrested the threshold to 300 workers from existing 100 whereas an industrial establishment can go for reconciliation without government permission.

While the government tried to keep a tab on the exploitation claim in future but the latest data released by the Labour Bureau reveals that India lost 11.73 lakh man-days to strikes in 2017 which was higher by 4.9% in comparison to 2016. Government data also suggests that around 600 textile mills were permanently closed down in the country due to financial problems created by strikes, labour problems, locusts, etc.

Flexibility Leads to New Job Creation

The Economic Survey 2019-20 provides an interesting comparison of states with flexible labour laws and those states which did not make changes in past few years. The Economic Survey classified states into West Bengal, Assam, Haryana, Kerala, and Bihar as inelastic labour laws while Punjab, Gujarat, and Rajasthan made remarkable changes in their labour laws. Survey points out that the number of firms established in the states having flexible labour laws outnumbered the states with inelastic laws in any given year. Study by economists at different points proves that entrepreneurial activity (establishing of new firms) has a significant positive impact on gross domestic product. A 10% increase in registration of new firms per district-year yields a 1.8% increase in GDP of any district of the country, economic survey 2016-20 pointed out after examining data of new firms and economic growth of 60 districts across 22 states of the country.

New Labour Code and Gender Equality

Now, women will be entitled to equal employment opportunities for all types of work and after taking consent from them, the employer can deploy women in eight shift as well. The code makes it mandatory for industrial establishments to provide washrooms, bathing places, and other rooms for male, female, and transgender employees. The importance of providing equal opportunities to women workforce in the economy can be gauged from a report by McKinsey Global Institute which claims that if women participated in the Indian economy at the level men, then India’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP) could be increased by 90 per cent above its projected GDP by 2025. The flexibility to work in shifts and in any industry is expected to boost female labour force participation rate of women who are employed or are seeking work as a proportion of the working age female population – in the Indian economy which is dismal at only 24.3% in 2019 as per the World Bank. In comparison to India, Bhutan’s 52.6% per cent, Nepal’s 31.6 per cent, and Ghana’s 68.6% per cent, and Bangladesh’s 36.14 per cent, women participate in productive work of the economy.

During the entire period of the freedom struggle for the country Gandhi alone came out as the leader who dealt with the twin issues of sanitation and hygiene and removal of untouchability. One should remember Shri Amritlal Thakkar who was the first volunteer to work on his own initiative for the removal of untouchability and amelioration of the Dalit communities in the country. He found a strong and perhaps superior partner in Gandhi. Gandhi dealt with the issues more comprehensively. The other leaders who contributed their might in the freedom struggle were in full agreement with Gandhi on the twin issues, but none showed the inclination to take it up at a personal level with the intensity with which Gandhi did it. It appears that Ambedkar was also interested in the political reform rather than the social one. He has to bear with him that for the tolerance he had developed out of his personal experience. But it must also be pointed out that his taking the problem of oppressed classes into political domain yielded the help to the social reform process. He was honest to admit that he was not interested in any social reform of the kind that Gandhi was looking for. The Government of India Bill was passed by the British Parliament and it got the Royal assent on August 4, 1935 and it became Government of India Act 1935. The political rule of the Dalits was attached with it. The composition of Fossil Petrol there were and Dalits with persistent struggle under the leadership of Ambedkar gained a definite political space. Ambedkar and his reformists associates seemingly did not apply their minds on sanitation and hygiene situation in the country and among the Dalits. Untouchability issues were also political for them. Ambedkar did not push for any integration of assimilation of Dalits into the main national social-political structure in his own right and had been exposed to modernity. He did not look kindly at the Hindu religion and its followers. The independence movement of 1930-35 and the British India Act implied serious local and national and regional political formations by the political parties that had come into existence by then. None of the parties that represented religious and other population in the country accepted the Act. However, since it was going to be implemented the political parties were not far away from fighting for power. This was the beginning of new local politics in India. Ambedkar gave a call to depressed classes to leave the Hindu fold and create "any other religion which guaranteed them equal status". Sudhakar Nayar notes that this call was taken as an invitation by Christian missionaries to proselytise Dalits so we see with one another the souls of Harijans. Obviously, it was not because they were incited in removal of untouchability, but because of their chances in the legislative assemblies. Another political strategist would have forgotten and gone for manipulations. Gandhi, from the inner recess, was searching for a deeper love. Speaking in a meeting in Gandhi, Veer Sargh, he said, Whatever Dr. Ambedkar does, we must be in it all; it should not be shown as separate from Harijans. If he really live with us, we must bear even that... If the and other Harijans who have no faith in Harijans embrace another religion, that other religion will also make for our exploitation. We deserve such treatment. When an issue is political it yields to experience, manipulations, exaggerations and propaganda. The word spread that Dr. Ambedkar could handle over 30 million people to those who were willing to accept them!!! Missionaries and evangelists all over the world started huge propagandas. All kinds of its were circulated. It also had manipulations. Gandhi explained that a missionary had stated that a huge number had converted to Christianity giving the impression that it was due to the movement led by Dr. Ambedkar. In fact the number that was in circulation suffered conversion that have taken place from the time when the first church had come in in India centuries ago! Conversions indeed took place at some places after the Government of India Act 1935 came into force, but what was the condition of the converts? Gandhi found the condition of Indian Christians no better. In the issue of 19 December 1935 Harijan he wrote, "Indeed the claim of untouchability is in spite of the nominal change of faith so far as the social status is concerned. Needless to say I am referring to the masses, not individuals. Gandhi had explored the amount of money that was being spent by the Christian missions to secure conversions of untouchables and giving them hope of their freedom. Gandhi rightly knew that the masses among Dalits had been linked and nurtured with other tribes and deeply embedded in the cultural past. Unless the society changed its attitude towards them and embraced them as brothers, change of faith would not change their real status. Gandhi was worried also that if such conversions happened in large proportions there would be savage fights between the converts and the non-converts. Interestingly, missionaries of various denotations kept calling Gandhi to declare that his cause was sign. C.F. Andrews and Godnath had difference of opinion on the issue. Andrews took a position that he was opposed to proselytisation but as an individual was convinced after thought and prayer, he should be allowed to convert. Muslims and Sikhs were not behind. They started.worring the untouchables to convert. The discussion should end here because the subject is sanitation and the communities identified with it traditionally. But it would be instructive to end it with a statement that finally Dr. Ambedkar took the issue after having given the call. For political reasons he could not have supported the Dalits to convert to Christianity because it would only strengthen the hands of British rulers. Muslims would give equal rights to Dalits as a religious follower. But in the final analysis Ambedkar wrote, purely from the standpoint of the Hindus... Sikhs is the best. If the depressed classes joined them or Christianity, they not only go out of Hindu religion, but they also go out of Hindu culture... if they become Sikhs, they remain within the Hindu culture...
