Dr. K. Jeyaprakash

Yoga is an age-old art or practice of staying fit mentally and physically by means of exercises as well as mind control practices such as controlled breathing, deep meditation etc. Yoga is a way of life, an art of righteous living or an integrated system for the benefit of the body, mind and inner spirit. The word Yoga is a Sanskrit word which means ‘union’ i.e of the body, mind and spirit. This art originated, was perfected and practised in India thousands of years ago. Basically Yoga is an amalgamation of breathing exercises and structured movement. It is an excellent tool to enhance the body’s internal health and external beauty and to achieve a higher standard of overall health and immunity. The application of these yoga practices to cure various mental and physical diseases is called yoga therapy.

Yoga’s stretching and breathing exercises improve your flexibility, helping joints, tendons and muscles stay limber. It is an excellent weight-bearing exercise that can improve your bone density. People suffering from hypertension can benefit from yoga tremendously, as yoga can lower your heart rate and blood pressure. Yoga benefits anyone’s mental health, reduces anxiety and stress keeping him or her relax, so it is an effective form of psychological therapy. Health and fitness have become areas of major concern in the fast paced life of today and the popularity of yoga is increasing in leaps and bounds all around the globe. And more importantly, people are reaping the immense benefits of this art. Although the practice of yoga has been prevailing in India from several centuries, yoga as a career option has become popular only in the recent past. EN 28/75
Passage I: Zimbabwe's prolonged political crisis reached the boiling point earlier this month when President Robert Mugabe dismissed the Vice-President, Emmerson Mnangagwa. A battle to succeed the 93-year-old liberation hero-turned-President had already been brewing within the ruling Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (Zanu-PF), with the old guard backing Mr. Mnangagwa, himself a freedom fighter, and "Generation 40," a coup of younger leaders supporting Mr. Mugabe's 52-year-old wife, Grace. Ms. Mugabe, known for her extravagant lifestyle and interfered frequently, has been vocal in recent months about her political ambitions. Mr. Mugabe was seen to have endorsed her when on November 6 he dismissed Mr. Mnangagwa. But Mr. Mugabe, who has ruled Zimbabwe since its independence in 1980, erred on two counts he underestimated the deep connections Mr. Mnangagwa has within the establishment and overestimated his own power in a system he has helped shape. In the good old days, Mr. Mugabe was able to rule with an iron grip. But those days are gone. Age and health problems have weakened his bold on power, while there is a groundswell of anger among the public over economic mismanagement.

So when he turned against a man long seen by the establishment as his successor, Mr. Mugabe left little doubt that he was acting from a position of political weakness. This gave the security forces the confidence to turn against him and make it clear they didn't want a Mugabe dynasty. The military doesn't want to call its action a coup d'état, because (a) they wanted Mrs. Mugabe as the President, (b) they were aware of Mugabe's failing wealth, (c) they had not a Mugabe dynasty, (d) they did not want a failing regime, (e) they did not want a change of government, (f) they didn't want a coup.
