FutureSkills is a unique partnership for skill development between government and industry, started with the vision to make India the global hub for talent in the emerging technologies. Seeing the success of FutureSkills in bringing competitors to collaborate and offer highly industry relevant learning content to the employees of the industry, the government of India invited Nasscom to open up this platform to all Indian citizens.

According to a Nasscom report out of the 84k graduates produced in FY 2020 in India, only 45k-50k job ready candidates for a role in Digital Technologies. The demand for digitally equipped candidates is currently 3x higher than the available talent pool and is further expected to rise 2x higher by 2024. This demand-supply gap has led to a shortage of employable talent despite students graduating in huge numbers every year.

We live in a time when learning has shattered all borders. No more do we need a brick and mortar facility and a human trainer to learn desired skills. In the past few months, the locked-down generation has even leveraged webinars to get trained on any and every skill - be it human brain - those who are digitally equipped.

To meet this rising demand, efforts from the government and industry, including policy level initiatives like the Skill India programme and the NSDC's Digital India Skill Development Program (DIP), have gained momentum. Under the aegis of the National Skill Development Corporation (NSDC) and Ministry of Skill Development, Partnerships, and Entrepreneurship (MSDE), sector skill councils (SSCs) like IT-Tech Industry- set up a group working towards 'Skills of the Future'. This team recommended the setting-up of an industry-driven, collaborative, learning platform, an aggregator marketplace.

In the two years of its journey, many aspects of the collaborative vision of FutureSkills have come true which have been further evolved into a bigger avatar of FutureSkills Prime.

In consideration of the new National Education Policy of India, unveiled in September 2020, it was found that many of its tenets are fully supported on FutureSkills. From faculty development, use of NSDC aligned online courses for credits, use of blended learning as a preferred modus operandi and most importantly, emphasis on skills like creativity, problem solving, design thinking, communication, collaboration, etc.

FutureSkills has shown the power of having a common vision across all its constituents.

CAREER AS GEOLOGIST - AN OVERVIEW

Nidhi Prasad

Let us first understand in simple terms who is a Geologist?

A person who studies the history of the earth, meaning there by what the earth is made of and how it has formed. A geologist studies the solid, liquid and gaseous matter that constitutes the earth and other elements as well as the process that shape them. Unlike many scientists, geologists work in the field and also in labs.

Geology is more of a multidisciplinary science and not a fundamental science, as it uses the principles of physics, chemistry, biology and mathematics to study the earth. The study is both field and laboratory-based although the findings are derived from textbook observations. It is essential that all geological concepts must eventually be tested in labs and be able to explain natural geological phenomena.

Geological findings are applied to the fields of remote sensing, resource mapping, computer simulations and recycling technology. It is not limited to only the study of the origin of rocks and minerals. It also unravels the mysteries of the ancient past. It also covers other interesting subjects like palaeontology which focuses on understanding the origin and evolution of many extinct flora and fauna. Geology also includes the study of various land forms including mountains, hills, valleys, plateaux, rivers, glaciers and also many activities that happen on the earth's surface including landslides, volcanoes, earthquakes etc.

Interest in opting for academics or research, then you can join the M.Phil or Ph.D course in Geology and appear the National Education Test (NET) which UGC conducts every year.

There are four courses to pursue in order to become a Geologist. These are as follows:

1. UNDERGRADUATE COURSES:
   • Bachelor of Science (B.Sc) in Geology, Earth Science, Environmental Science.
   • Bachelor of Science (Hons.) in Geology.
   • Bachelor of Arts (B.A) in Geology, Earth Science, Environmental Science.

2. POSTGRADUATE COURSES:
   • Master of Science (M.Sc) in Geology, Applied Geology.
   • Master of Science (Hons.) in Geology.
   • Master of Technology in Geology, Applied Geology.

3. There is also a Doctoral Course available for Geologists in which one can do a Ph.D in Geology.

Specializations available in Geology:

There are the various specialities from which you can choose the one which best suits your interest:
   • Marine Geology
   • Engineering Geology
   • Structural Geology
   • Geomorphology
   • Economic Geology
   • Geochemistry
   • Volcanology
   • Mineralogy

WORK DESCRIPTION

A geologist studies the composition of the earth, assesses the natural disasters and its effects on the environment, explores areas rich in under-water resources, oil, natural gas and minerals and determines the quality of soil by conducting geochemical and geophysical tests.

The main function of Geologists is to understand the history of our planet and how its materials, structures, processes and organisms have changed over the period of time. They perform their job by making geologic maps and charts, analyzing aerial photographs, rock samples and other data sources to locate deposits of natural resources, preparing written scientific reports, and conducting laboratory tests on samples collected in the field. Overall, Geologists play a vital role in exploring the mineral wealth and natural resources.

   • Collect information in the field, from seismic data and other sources.
   • Monitor the acquisition of data to ensure consistent quality.
   • Interpret data to determine subsurface geology and the economic importance of natural resources.
   • Develop geological models of the earth's subsurface to understand the geologic structure, rock characteristics, and the likely distribution of oil gas/metal bearing strata.
   • Assess the potential quality of minerals and hydrocarbon resources.
   • Collaborate with drilling engineers at drilling sites on the basis of the interpretation of the data and models developed.
   • Produce and present geological maps and reports.
   • Perform detailed geological risk analysis of proposed exploration targets.
   • Plan and undertake an exploration drilling programme after collecting and interpreting all available data.

SKILLS REQUIRED

Geologist should possess:
   • Excellent analytical and communicational skills.
   • Ability to understand basic engineering principles.
   • Passion about the geological and environmental.
   • Mapping techniques.
   • Flexibility and versatility.
   • Enthusiasm, patience and perseverance.
   • Ability to use scientific rules and ways to resolve an issue.
   • Spirit of investigation.
   • Clarity and precision in dealing with data of various types.
   • Initiative, responsibility and ability to get along in a group.
   • Good numerical aptitude.
   • Adaptability to work alone or in a group.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES IN GEOLOGY

Geology is one such career which opens the door to a plethora of other opportunities. One can work in private companies or consultants firm in mining and mineral exploration areas. A geologist can also get opportunities to work in the industries related to mining, oil and gas, minerals and water resources. Students who study Geology can later on move on to the courses such as Paleontology, Geophysics, Mining, Environmental Education, Petrol, etc. and can think of becoming:
   • Geographers
   • Geologists
   • Oceanographers
   • Meteorologists
   • Seismologists
   • Processing Geophysicists
   • Researchers

Some of the top sectors that require Geologists are mentioned below:

   • Petroleum and mining companies
   • Contracting firms
   • Technical sales department
   • Consulting geology and engineering firms
   • Governments, educational institutions
   • Teaching
   • Manufacturing
   • Environment protection firms
   • Construction and utility companies
   • Environmental consulting firms
   • Engineering firms

JOB ROLES:

There are some of the most sought-after jobs profiles in the field of Geology. Geologists can work for private industries, government, museums, colleges and universities.

Geologist job profiles are:

Geological Technologists: Their job is to conduct or direct geological or geophysical surveys and prospecting field trips, assist engineers and geologists in the evaluation and analysis of petroleum and mineral reservoirs. They also prepare/supervise the preparation of rock, mineral or metal samples and perform physical and chemical laboratory tests.

Engineering Geologist: Their job is to identify and deal with geological factors affecting engineering works. They consult geological maps and aerial photographs to advice on site selection and oversee the progress of specific contracts. They also assess the integrity of soil, rock, groundwater and other natural conditions prior to major construction projects.

Geochimist: They analyze the age, nature and components of rock, minerals, soil and other environmental samples, map specific geochemical areas for research and analysis and provide support and recommendations to mainstream geologists.

Geophysicist: They are responsible for controlling the quality of the seismic, magnetic and other data collected and interpreted in order to create maps of the build-up of hydrocarbons. They design, test, modify and repair seismograph equipment and compile charts and reports.

Geoscientist: They are involved in interpreting geophysical, geochemical and geological data to develop models of the subsurface of the earth. They collect information in the field, from seismic and well data from other sources and monitor the acquisition of data to ensure consistent quality. Moreover, they implement new technologies in geological modeling and seismic processing.

Hydrogeologist: Hydrogeologists interpret technical data and information from maps and historical documents, to build a conceptual model of groundwater flow and quality. They undertake field work and site visits for investigative and monitoring purposes and apply their knowledge of fundamental geology to develop an understanding of how rock types and structure in an area impact on groundwater occurrence and movement.

Seismologist: It involves locating earthquakes and earthquake faults using geological data. Seismologists engage in depth study of earthquakes and the structure of the earth.

Marine Geologist: It is a broad domain associated with the study of the ocean floor; it draws from a wide number of fields including geophysics, geochronology, sedimentology and paleoanthropology to make investigations about the ocean floor and the coastal zone.

WHY DIGITAL SKILLING MATTERS FOR INDIA’S YOUTH?

stakeholders. Collaboration across industry, academia, government and learning providers has driven each one of them to ask as much about what they can contribute to the initiative as about what can be expected from FutureSkills Prime on these issues.

The future is full of hope but the challenge is to close this demand-supply gap through skilling. It is yet far from over. AI first, there’s a need to understand why this demand is shooting up so rapidly?

Understanding rise in demand for Digital Talent in India

Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella mentioned that the world has witnessed 2 years of digital transformation in just 2 months. The year 2020 has been a boon for technology, as the every industry including non-TI firms had to adopt digital ways of working. Living through a black swan, these companies have realised that they’ve been under-investing in technologies and tools that can potentially speed up their business advantages. Now, as they look to reinvent themselves to stay relevant post-pandemic times, demand for professionals with digital skills is expected to shoot up.

Emerging usage like Online delivery of services, Online education/learning/deduction, Digital payments, Automated loan processing, OTT services, Telemedicine, Temperature checks, and CCTVs cameras to monitor social distancing including many others have emerged across sections like IT Services/Software & Internet, Telecom, Healthcare & Pharmaceuticals, Consumer Electronics among others owing to substantial lockdowns and restrictions imposed across the world.

Increased demand for tech enabled services has warranted a necessity for tech professionals who fit in job roles like Data Scientist, Data Architect, 3D Printing Specialist, IoT Software Analyst across emerging technologies like Artificial Intelligence (AI) & Big Data Analytics, Cloud Computing, Cyber security, and Internet of Things etc.

Why Digitally Skilled Manpower is India’s opportunity?

By 2030, India will have more than 90 million people joining the workforce! It makes it the largest workforce in the world. As the need to create AI based applications is constantly on the rise, imparting the youth with future skills has become an imperative.

According to LinkedIn’s third annual Jobs Report aiming to increase their competitiveness by 2.5 times by 2021, Indian companies have already identified the opportunity to leverage new technologies which is why job roles in emerging technologies like Blockchain Developer, AI Specialist and Java Script Developer are the most sought after roles in India. Clearly, the future belongs to those who are tech-enabled.

Expectations from post COVID job market

The COVID-19 pandemic has accelerated the pace of digital technology being adopted by enterprises and has virtualized our world overnight. As newer trends emerge, a massive up-gradation of new tech jobs in the global labour market is expected in times to come. According to Teamlease, a recruitment firm, there will be an increased demand for digital skills both in existing and new job roles as the world requires more automated, touchless and secure solutions.

This pace of change is unprecedented and it is imperative that we equip the future workforce of India with the right tools as early as possible to prepare them for a human-tech coexistence that they will encounter.

This is a massive opportunity for everyone in this country to be well versed in AI and other future technologies regardless of the work they do.

Why skilling matters for everyone?

A McKinsey Global Institute report suggests that technologies like AI will soon be highly relevant to automotive, banking, consumer goods, healthcare, insurance, pharmaceuticals, retail, telecommunication, and transport & logistics sectors. Fundamentally, any industrial vertical that is data-oriented is set to undergo AI-driven transformation. This means, every job role is going to be impacted by tech disruption in future.

Perhaps no group will be more affected by jobs in technology than our future workforce, that is, our youth. Therefore, it becomes significant that our future workforce, regardless of their education background, becomes digitally fluent and gets equipped with at-least basics of emerging technologies to be able to cope with the tech disruption in the future.

How Future Skills Prime is working to future-proof careers in emerging technology?
