5G TECHNOLOGY TO SPUR ECONOMIC PROGRESS

Prasoon Srivastava

People know about their belongings—house, car, furniture, TV, refrigerator etc but how does it sound if you come to know that all your belongings know who their owner or the user is?

Our refrigerator will be able to sense when milk is about to get over and alert the milk vendor to deliver the required stock. Our home will be able to identify our footsteps, along with facial recognition, voice sensors when we enter and secure the premises when we exit.

Think of a farmer watering or monitoring his crop in early hours of cold winter mornings with help of drones without even getting out of his bed. Think of him ploughing his land with a tractor using a mobile phone application while he is on his way to sell his produce to a mandi.

These are some of the magical, rather transformational changes, the next generation telecom technology 5G will usher in our world.

This will be an era of the Internet of Things (IoT), machine learning, artificial intelligence etc when all objects will be able to communicate through broadband signals with each other with help of several sensors.

The world has already started shifting into the era of the emerging technologies with the help of 4G technology. However, the full potential of modern technologies can be realised only with the beginning of 5G.

4G Vs 5G

4G has changed our TV viewing experience, communicating with peers from voice call to video calls, business meetings on mobile etc. However, the bandwidth available to provide 4G service is far less compared to bandwidth of 5G.

What makes 5G a transformational technology is the amount of computational work that it can support over wireless networks with several fold more bandwidth compared to 4G.

At present, India can potentially deploy 4G in 8 spectrum frequency bands - 700 megahertz (Mhz) band, 800 Mhz band, 900 Mhz band, 2100 Mhz band, 2300 Mhz band, 2500 Mhz band and 2600 Mhz band. Every band comprises around 100 Mhz of frequencies. However, the signals become weak after a few kilometers and the same set of frequencies are reused by installing a mobile tower. India is divided in 22 telecom circles for the purpose of division and allocation of airwave frequencies. Hence, the 800 Mhz of frequencies are being reused across India on circle basis.

In the case of spectrum, signals cover more area in lower frequency bands i.e. in terms of numerical value. For example, mobile signals transmitted in 700 Mhz band will cover three times more area than signals transmitted in 2100 Mhz band.

When it comes to 5G, a high level panel set up under the Ministry of Telecom identified around 6000 Mhz of radiowaves.

Role of Achievement Motivation in Realization of Goals

Vijay Prakash Srivastava

If you look around, you can easily find people who, though are in a similar age group, differ in respect of their achievements and accomplishments. There are students who are average in academics and also don’t have any other accomplishment to mention. On the other hand, it is not difficult to find students whose academic performance is excellent and who are also good in sports or music or debating etc. This study can be extended to people of all age groups. You’ll come across mothers who are playing role excellently well and are also accomplished painter, dancer or theatre artist etc.

The above examples have been cited to explore answer to the question—why some people accomplish so much in life, while others are not able to do much even when the situations for both is similar. From accomplishments here we don’t mean accumulation of wealth or physical assets. We are talking of something which may be personal but puts you in a different league because of its manifestation and social value. For example if someone writes poetry, she may be deriving immense satisfaction from it herself, while the poetry may be a source of inspiration and enjoyment for many others.

Coming back to the above question, if somebody thinks that resources are the foundation of accomplishments, this answer is not convincing. There are so many people who have abundant resources but have no valuable accomplishments whereas people lacking in resources have proved to be significant achievers. Talent also is not the right answer. First, there is no specific or clear measurement of talent, and even if somebody is considered to be talented, it is not necessary that she will prove to be achiever. When the board results are announced, we come across so many cases of boys and girls from poor and deprived backgrounds who were not considered talented, but did exceedingly well in the examination. Even if you see the profile of many candidates declared successful in recent civil services examination results, you’ll find that they were far from being considered talented in traditional sense of the term.

Enough research has been done in the matter and it has been found that more than resource or talent, the motivation to do or accomplish something is the real foundation of success and achievement. Such motivation has been termed as achievement motivation. So, those who want to achieve something, need to have achievement motivation in the first place.

Motivation is the underlying reason for human behaviour. It comes in two forms: intrinsic motivation and extrinsic motivation. Extrinsic motivation comes from outside. You score well in examination and win appreciation. You get a promotion etc. Intrinsic motivation is getting inspired by someone to become like him or her, also comes under extrinsic motivation. One key feature of this motivation is that it is in a measurable equal measure. There has to be someone to influence, inspire or encourage you.

In comparison, intrinsic motivation is a constant within you. It is not difficult to find people who, without receiving any external encouragement, keep pursuing their goals to excel, to do or achieve something worthwhile inside and keeps pushing the person in that direction. Also, it is easier for any extrinsic motivation to be fruitful, it has to get converted into its intrinsic form. A student may always be encouraged by parents to perform better in future, but to really study hard the student needs to be committed himself. It may also happen that the student acts to be studying by keeping books before her but in fact is not attentive in study and is involved with some other thoughts.

There is a direct correlation between achievement, motivation and achievements. If someone doesn’t put the required effort in a venture, it indicates lack of achievement. In a similar manner, earlier achievement motivation is a primary condition to really achieve something.

In today’s times achievement is considered to be a key factor for personal and social advancement. The whole system of education involves around academic achievements of students in school, college or university. How one chooses one’s career and navigates through it, is also determined by the person’s achievement motivation, though external factors always play their role.

Your achievement motivation shall be determined how you leverage your personality and achievement environment to fulfill your aspirations with efforts and persistence.

Let us first talk about which are the things that come in the way of our success or becoming an achiever. These may differ from person to person. As an individual, one has to identify which of these, if any, is applicable for her.

Procrastination: Procrastination means unnecessarily delaying execution of your plans. We may think and plan so many things. But if we don’t execute; these have no meaning. The plan may be related to anything-doing physical exercise, completing assignments etc. Procrastination isn’t good for you. It harms us in multiple ways. Since we’re stuck up with things which we don’t want to do, we don’t want to move on and take up something new, or move up to the next level. And when we try and don’t accomplish, it lowers our self-esteem and confidence.

Accepting defeat without trying: In many cases we already decide that a particular goal is unattainable for us and then there is no question of trying and making efforts. Infact, this is a dangerous situation because we might be losing the world we had been thinking of. That individuals and the world had not progressed to this extent and many of the inventions wouldn’t have been possible. By stopping the process of doubting about your abilities, even if you make a beginning in the right direction of your goals; the efforts made would be half hearted; lowering your chances of success.

Thinking that you don’t have the resources: For every action we take in life, you need resources be it a job search, preparation for a competitive examination or starting a business etc. Resources can be time, money, space, books, time etc. Here also if you conclude that you don’t have the required resources, you’ve already lost half of you. So just remember; this world is not equally privileged or rich. But real success doesn’t belong to only physically fully equipped with resources. You may find large number of examples of people who despite their humble background and underprivileged state, are achieving big things to keep things in order here is that resources can be generated and you need to make best use of the available resources. Worth remembering is the valuable saying of our former president Arvind Kejriwal that aspirations are greater than resources.

Not putting in your best: This is the age of competition and though there are abundantly opportunities we have to prove to ourselves that we’re good enough to take up your boat in whatever you do. When you make honest and dedicated efforts, you’re confident that you become your’s and not just yours. If you ever doubt yourself, regret that you didn’t try enough. If you indeed want something, you’ll be strong and sincere in pursuit. The belief is that you’re not ashamed in their efforts and blame other challenges. Let this not happen in your life.

Now that we’ve talked about what you should get rid of more aligned to success, let us find out traits, habits etc. Which makes you take up the initiative and try to move up in your life. Always make decisions when you want to achieve something.

Self-belief: If we want to achieve something, first we should believe that it is possible for us to achieve that. If anything is coming into your way, you need to make self-analysis and bring the improvements which are needed. Each one of us has potential. Understanding its and strategically working towards realising this potential will provide you satisfaction and fulfillment. Also let us accept that the fact that one is not perfect, we all are working progress and in the process should always try to be better and making efforts to take the goal to the other and also keep learning from our mistakes.

Discipline: Discipline is something which is mostly taught by our elders, parents and teachers. Now when we are grown up, we don’t have to get lessons in it from others. We need to be self-disciplined. Discipline isn’t difficult to follow, but is for the good and hence we need to master it. Knowing our priorities, sticking to them, creating our priorities and maintaining our habits, all these are part of discipline. Don’t mistake it for a regimented routine. An enjoyable life can also be made enjoyable with discipline.

Getting rid of the fear of failure: It is a simple fact that everyone is not going to succeed every single time. Success and failures are both parts of life. Still many of us are not ready to accept or face failure. If somebody doesn’t take a desired initiative due to fear of failure, it results in nothing. Take any competitive examination, if an ambitious young person is always afraid that she won’t get enough marks if not going to qualify in this, they would be considered responsible for this negative thought.

A person should definitely fight to win, but shouldn’t be disheartened if desired results don’t come. Failures need not be used as lessons for learning and improvements. Failures can be the lessons for great scientists, authors etc.; you’ll realize the truth behind this message.

Focus and determination: Focus is highly crucial to achievements. In many cases, when a person has the talent and substance to succeed, being unfocused and shallow. It’s important to accept the fact that during your day to day routine, there would be distractions, but the challenges are within your ability to overcome these and remain focused on your important goals. There should be continuity in efforts.

Inability situations will arise and you’ll have to work with your short term performance. Instead of getting frustrated, be patient if you analyze the results and ensure that those are not hindering your efforts.

Creating proper environment: You get a given environment and there is one person who is not interested in it and the latter, you have to take a few initiatives. For instance, if you want to learn playing guitar, it would always be good if you find one or more individuals who too are interested in guitar. Joining a music club may also be of help. So, whichever area you choose, try to gather meaningful references and support. It will need proactiveness on your part. You’ll soon realize that this enabling environment is helpful to you and you derive emotional satisfaction.

Review of progress: Three days we’re so preoccupied that there is hardly enough time to look back and objectively review what we’ve been doing. A periodic review is necessary to evaluate our progress in pursuance of our goal. This review should give us significant inputs to take our performance to the desired level. For example we may not have been good in time management or we may have wasted a lot of time on work that has been slow.

An achievement can be both big and small. So, one should not consider only getting a job or getting selected as an achievement. Sometimes smaller achievements can carry significant value.

Motivation to achieve is not equal for every goal. To explain, one cannot expect to cook as well as read a book. We should choose to be motivated to do what we actually want to do. A cricket aficionado may not want to get into music, though both are major sports.

Achievement motivation of people have made them to conquer Everest, create new Olympic records, produce great literary works and create great scientific theories. Such people can be our role model.

To conclude, in order to live a life full of meaning, excitement, happiness and satisfaction, we must know what we want to do and then, chart out a road map to accomplish these. However our ultimate success in realizing our goals depends upon our achievement motivation and only we can create such motivation.

5G TECHNOLOGY TO SPUR ECONOMIC PROGRESS

that can be used for the next generation technology compared to a set of 800 MHz of radio waves used in 4G.

The panel has spotted spectrum for 5G service across 11 bands of which 4 bands are premium 700 MHz band, 3.5 gigahertz (GHz), 24 GHz and 28 GHz band can be made immediately available for the service.

According to the 5G panel estimates, 5,250 MHz of spectrum can be made available for 5G services in higher frequency bands, 300 MHz in 3.5 GHz band and 405 MHz spectrum in sub-1000 MHz.

At present the government has identified 306 MHz of frequency between 3300-3600 MHz range for 5G services. As per propagation behaviour of waves, the 5G signals will cover much smaller areas but with high speed.

The nature of 5G technology is very different from 4G technology. It can be related to an example of a water pipe where the speed of water coming out of a thin pipe is slower than water coming out of thin pipe.

The 5G technology will need special types of smaller mobile tower or points to transmit signals compared to base stations being deployed for 4G. Even the base stations (BTS) for 4G are smaller compared to BTS deployed for 2G. The 5G connectivity is considered to be more related to 4G because it will be able to connect devices almost like a dedicated connection.

Radio waves in E band, which falls in 71-76 GHz and 81-86 GHz range, and V band, which is 57-64 GHz, can transmit data at very high speeds and even replace optical fibre for short distance data transmission.

5G Roll Out

Overall over 100 commercial 5G networks have been rolled out. This includes networks in the US, China, South Korea, Sweden, Finland, Germany, Canada, Brazil, Argentina, Saudi Arabia etc.

According to a mobile broadband analysis company, 5G networks are recording download speed of 377 megabit per second compared to around 30 mbps that consumers are getting on 4G networks. Ideally 5G technology is expected to deliver speed of 1 gigabit per second on wireless networks.

The telecom ministry in India had set a target in 2018 to roll out 5G in India by 2020 and also allocate spectrum to companies for conducting trials so that the country can deploy independently developed telecom gears in the network due to apprehensions around security. Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi recently delivered the inaugural address at the virtual India Mobile Money (IMM) 2020 through video conference. The theme for IMM 2020 was "Inclusive Innovation: Reducing, Resilient, Sustainable", it aims to align with the Prime Minister's vision to promote "Make in India", "Digital India", and "Sustainable development, entrepreneurship & innovation". It also aims to give foreign and local investments, encourage R&D in the telecom and emerging technology sectors.

Addressing the event, the Prime Minister gave a call to work together to make India a global hub for telecom equipment, design, development and manufacturing.

He cautioned that due to technological upgradation, we have a culture of replacing gadgets very frequently. He asked the delegates to ponder whether the industry can form a task-force to think of a better way of handling the electronic and circular economy. He urged to work together to ensure a timely roll-out of 5G to keep into the future and empower millions of Indians.

Shri Modi said it is important to think and plan how to improve lives with the upcoming technology. He added that better healthcare, better education, better information and opportunities for our farmers, better market access for small businesses are some of the things that technology can provide.

He lauded the delegates from the telecom sector that the world was functional despite the pandemic due to their innovation and efforts. He added that due to their efforts that a son was connected with his mother in a different city, a student learnt from his teacher without being in the same room, a patient consulted his doctor from his home and a trader, connected to the world consumption is not consumed from a different geography.

The Prime Minister stressed that it is because of mobile technology that we are able to provide benefits worth billions of dollars in healthcare. "We had to scale up and scale down," he added and said that without it, the poor and vulnerable quickly during the pandemic.

"We are seeing billions of cash transactions which boost formalisation and productivity", he said. "We will also enable a smooth contactless interface on toll booths."

The Prime Minister said that the Government aims to bring high speed fibre-optic connectivity in every village over the next three years. He said that towards this end, focus is made exclusively on places which can make the best out of such connectivity.

Agrarian Districts, Left wing extremism affected districts, North Eastern states, Lakshadweep Islands etc. He added that greater spread of fixed line broadband connectivity and public Wi-Fi hotspots will be ensured.

5G ecosystem readiness in India

Telecom companies in India claim to be 5G ready and are waiting for spectrum auction to buy radio waves frequency to start rolling out the next generation technology.

However, the Department of Telecom, Department of Space and DoD are claiming their need for spectrum frequencies that have been identified for the 5G services.

The DoT identified a frequency band 3300-3600 MHz that can be used for 5G service but after the claim of ISRO and ISRO, only 175 MHz of radio waves remains for mobile services. Telecom operators have said that they need at least 100 MHz of spectrum per operator to roll out 5G services.

Mobile phone companies have started selling 5G ready phones in India. Telecom network versions like India and Ericsson are making 5G equipment in India and are exporting to countries where commercial roll out of the network has started.

Reliance Jio has announced that it is developing in-house 5G technology. Due to non-availability of spectrum in India, the company's subsidiary Radays is testing 5G solutions developed by it in the United States.

IT company Tech Mahindra and telecom manufacturing firm FTI have partnered to develop indigenous 5G enabled devices, core systems etc.

Telecom operators have been demanding from the government to make available spectrum for 5G at the earliest and lower the reserve price.

Mobile service providers can start 5G services in India once suitable airwave frequencies are allotted to them by the government. Government telecom infrastructure operators through the auction process. Spectrum auctions in India were held every year between 2012 to 2016. The next round of spectrum auction has been announced for 2021 and will have 3300-3600 MHz band frequencies.

TRAI had recommended base price of proposed 5G spectrum in 3300-3600 MHz band at Rs 42 crores per MHz unreserved spectrum on pan India basis.

Telecom operators interested in buying radio waves for 5G will have to shell out close to Rs 50,000 crore for 100 megahertz of 5G spectrum required to deliver high speed broadband services.

SPECTRUM ISSUE

The DoT has invited to have requested the Space Department and Defence Ministry to vacate airwaves in the medium and high range spectrum bands for rolling out 5G services. The DoT had requested the Defence Ministry to vacate 100 megahertz (MHz) of spectrum in the frequency band of 3300-3400 MHz and use the spectrum in the 3600-3700 MHz band. It had also urged the DoD to vacate spectrum in the frequency band of 3600-3700 MHz.

The DoT has raised concerns over possible interference of 5G signals in data collection by satellites, which is crucial in the wake of climate change. The DoT had earlier asked the DoS to vacate the 26 GHz band, in which the DoD has developed, primarily for satellite services.

The proposal was presented before the World Radiocommunication Conference in line with the demand of the space department but the proposal was rejected by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU).

According to Ericsson, 5G mobile services are expected to create an USD 27 billion business opportunity for India by 2028. 5G generation communications technology will help in meeting computational power requirements of emerging technologies such as artificial intelligence (AI), machine learning.

According to an industry estimate, India holds potential to add over Rs 7,000 crore to the economy by 2035. However, it needs support of fast technologies like 5G for development of the ecosystem.

5G can also help in faster roll out of broadband in smaller towns as it has potential to provide speed on optical fibre network or wireless networks. This will enable telecom companies to bring broadband to households wirelessly without needing to dig trenches to lay teleco cables. The process to provide broadband through 5G will not only be cost but also it can be done costlessly. However, the mobile towers in the country need to be connected with optical fibres to support 5G traffic.

India needs to expedite the process of availability of 5G spectrum for telecom operators as it has potential to unlock several activities that can contribute to our GDP and expedite the growth rate as well.
