CHANGING WORK AND EMPLOYMENT SCENARIO

Dr. Ranjeet Mehta

Global shift towards increased development of IT by governments emerged in the nineties, with the advent of the World Wide Web. But today, the scale of the internet is so huge, that it doesn’t make sense to look at the information on a monthly basis, or even to use daily figures.

Digital technology is at the center of today’s economic development debate due to its wide use during the Covid-19 outbreak. Digital transformation is happening in technology to change the way you do business. It’s a fundamental cultural shift in how you interact with the customers.

In just one year, the COVID-19 crisis has brought about years of change in the way companies in all sectors and regions do business. According to a new McKinsey Global Survey of executives, their companies have accelerated the digitization of their customer and supply-chain interactions and their internal operations by three to four years. This share of digital or digitally enabled products in their portfolios has accelerated to a great extent. People expect most of these changes to be long lasting and companies are already making significant investments in technologies.

Not that technology is making a difference today but it was already disrupting production processes, especially through the rapid scale-up of digital platforms. Digital technology has been challenging the traditional boundaries of firms, changing global value chains and the geography of jobs. New business models - digital platform firms - have been able to evolve rapidly from local start-ups to massive global companies, often with few employees or tangible assets. Digital platforms have enabled clusters of businesses to form in underdeveloped rural areas.

India is on the cusp of a massive digital revolution. We are in exciting times and being a digitally native country; there is an opportunity to ride on the digital infrastructure to strengthen payments, trade and information flows. It is a sustainable and inclusive growth, India has skipped a generation in telecom technology going from no connectivity to over 350 million mobile internet users in less than two decades. The impending growth of digital assets has offered India with many unique opportunities to leapfrog its traditional deficit in physical infrastructure. It will help enhance the economic conditions in remote areas, spur new businesses by enabling access for a large number of Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs), creating a strong digital identity for the country. Above all, digital infrastructure growth will empower the government to embrace and enable innovation, provide resources to help increase agricultural productivity as well as enable improved healthcare access for rural areas, potentially reducing mortality levels. It will also bring financial services to the unbanked rural and underprivileged communities and help fulfill the country’s longstanding goal of education for all.

Technology has created seismic shifts in the mix of skills required to succeed in the labour market. While returns to routine, job-specific skills are declining, the premium for skills that cannot be replaced by robots has been increasing. These include cognitive skills such as critical thinking, as well as socio-behavioural skills such as managing and recognizing emotions that enhance teamwork. Earnings are higher for those who have a combination of these skills. The evolving world of work demands adaptable skills that enable workers to transfer more easily from one task to another.

GETTING READY FOR COMMON LAW ADMISSION TEST (CLAT)

Ari S

The nearly three decades ago for just a handful of students completing their SSC or intermediate, the focus used to be on two entrance tests IT entrance examination (now JEE) and JEE (now JEE Advanced) with passage of time more tests have come up, one of which is Common Law Entrance Examination popularly known as CLAT.

The need for CLAT began to select students for admission to National Law Universities. Before such law universities were established, law as a subject was taught usually at universities and at their affiliated colleges. Only after graduation a candidate was eligible for enrollment for LLB which is the common acronym for Bachelor of Law. National Law Universities came with five years integrated course leading to Bachelor of Law degree, known as BA, LLB Honours. This helped students to choose a career path in law right after their 12th standard. These Law Universities also brought a new respect to a qualification in law and legal education by maintaining high standard of education and also keeping the entry bar high.

The first National Law University was established at Bangalore in the year 1996. Now there are 22 such law universities spread all over India at Sonepat, Jodhpur, Shillim, Aurangabad, Mumbai, Hyderabad, Bengaluru, Raipur, Jodhpur, Lucknow, Nagpur, Tiruchirappalli, Visakhapatnam, Bhopal, Kolkata, Chandigarh, Ranchi, Patna, Kochi, Patiala, Guwahati and Cuttack. So, we can say that every major Indian state has a National Law University.

Admission to integrated undergraduate programme is in law B.A.LL.B (Hons.) at all these universities is on the basis of performance in the admission test CLAT. At few such universities B.B.L.L.B (Hons.) is also conducted. Any student with minimum 45 percent marks in 12th standard ( irrespective of discipline like Arts, Commerce, Science etc.) is eligible to appear in CLAT. This year CLAT is scheduled to be held in June. The objective of CLAT is to test a candidate for aptitude and skills considered relevant for an education in law. Candidates are mainly tested for reasoning and comprehension. CLAT is also held for postgraduate courses (LLM etc.) at the above universities. This article is about CLAT for undergraduate courses which carries the standard term of UG-CLAT, referred here as just CLAT.

CLAT in its latest form comprises 150 questions which are expected to be answered in a period of 2 hours i.e. 120 minutes. Each correct answer will fetch 1 mark for the candidate while for every wrong answer 1/4 mark would be deducted as per the system of negative marking. The 150 questions are from 5.

CHANGING WORK AND EMPLOYMENT SCENARIO

Digital technology has changed the terms of work. Rather than standard long-term contracts, digital technologies have given rise to more short-term work, often via online work platforms. Those gaps make certain kinds of work more accessible and flexible. The gig economy as of now has been slow to take over traditional occupations. The largest three global gig platforms - Freelancer of Australia, Upwork in the United States, and Zhubaijia in China - have 60 million total users; only 0.3 to 0.5% of the active labor force participate in the gig economy globally. It is expected that COVID-19 pandemic will reinforce these pre-existing trends and increase the urgency of corresponding policy responses. We have noticed that the platform firms are dominating markets even more. We are already seeing Amazon and Alibaba getting even bigger and stronger as brick-and-mortar stores are unable to compete. Companies will invest more in their ability to conduct business over the internet to be more resilient to potential lockdowns. Companies may also have more incentive to invest in automation and restore production to shield against value chain disruption. Digital technology is also improving people’s ability to work from home. This is subject to remote work, which depends on the type of jobs and tasks to be done, as well as digital capacity - varies significantly across and within countries. Jobs that are conducive to remote work are more prevalent in rich countries, where workers with higher levels of education and in salaried full-time jobs. Digital infrastructure is scarce or of low quality in many developing countries. The rapid spread of technology accelerated by the pandemic has led to a growing need for businesses and governments to adapt it. Technology can be a boon to society if businesses and governments prepare and adapt. The pandemic has pushed societies to an inflection point where digitizing technology is no longer an option, but a necessity. It has also created jobs at risk, in many cases of work that has no longer a need or a purpose. It is also more vulnerable. With the rise of online jobs and services, businesses and governments can take the crisis as an opportunity to build for the future. Many businesses, especially in developing economies, are digitally disconnected. They may not have access to workers with the right skills and face challenging business environments. Workers, on the other hand, lack protection and do not have the skills or learn in markets to adapt. To face these challenges, businesses need to embrace technology and training programs to equip their workers with the right skills. Businesses can also consider apprenticeships to equip future workers with the right sets of skills.

As businesses around the world were forced into working from-home environments due to COVID-19 stay-at-home orders, what was once vehemently opposed by some organizations became their only mode of operation. So now the reality is that Twitter announced that it will allow its employees to work from home "forever," part in part because "the past few months have proven we can make that work." The times are changing, and businesses and governments need to adapt. The pandemic has accelerated digitization and automation across a range of industries and sectors. This calls for upskilling and reskilling, both for human skills as well as digital skills. At the same time, policymakers have an equally major role in supporting employers, especially the MSMEs that account for the majority of employment in India and many other world economies. Employers, meanwhile, need to be ready to pivot their businesses towards the new models that are emerging. Despite the pinch of the COVID-19 must continue to look ahead with optimism. Time is not on our side. When work from home will have a sizable share in employment sector, getting new job opportunities for the unemployed youths located in rural areas. GETTING READY FOR COMMON LAW ...

The medium of law course is English. This is only one of the reasons for the applicants being tested in English. The segment of English is about 20 percent with 26 to 32 questions. There will be passages between 400 to 500 words on a general interest topic or a specific interest topic in the form. Each of the passages will have questions based on it expecting you to use your skills of reading, comprehension, expression, and observation. The questions in this section may ask you to read and comprehend the main points in the passage and also any view, points, opinion or argument presented in the passage, draw inferences and conclusions, compare or contrast the points, explain the meaning of key terms of the passage, give an opinion based on the given in the passage and may be summarizing the passage.

To do well in this section, you need to read the passage fast but with attention, understand the issues raised and the ideas behind it. In some cases, the ideas may be different from what you are familiar with. Some of the questions may be based on a topic you are not that much familiar with. These things shouldn't worry you. Let it be clear that you have a passage and you have to answer the questions in relation to the passage. Your personal opinion or thinking are of not any significant here. You need to be objective and keep away biases, in case you have any. Also since the test is objective, you're already provided with the correct answer in one of the options. You need to identify that option in the least possible time.

Current Affairs and General Knowlege:

There are many other competitive examinations in the section of general awareness, direct questions are asked (e.g. which of the following is the official currency of Malagasy) but CLAT, this section is also paper based. The passage will be related to some news or event of significance from India or the world or related to art, culture, history, international affairs, legal matter etc. This section will relate to the passage but the answer may be outside the passage. For exam. The passage on the latest Lok Sabha elections, there may be a question that in which year Lok Sabha elections were held in the country for the first time.

This section is expected to contain 55 to 59 questions and will comprise 25 percent of the test. To do well in this component of general knowledge and current affairs, you have to regularly refer to national newspapers. It would be better if you note down important news items in a diary. Think about which can be the possible questions related to these news. A general knowledge book is must to brush up along with a year book.

Being passage based the section is easier than it would have been with as many as 40 Independent questions.

Legal Reasoning:

This section is exclusive to CLAT. In this section, you may expect 35 to 39 questions which roughly contains 15 to 17 questions representing just 10 percent of the test. This section would comprise small set of facts or propositions or other lexical, graphical, pictorial or diagrammatic representation containing information from which a series of questions would follow. The candidates are expected to choose selective information from the above representation which are related to mathematical operation as required. For example in a graph, sales for different years may be given and you may be asked to find a difference in two different year sets.

This section will have questions based on the book which we studied in mathematics in HSC (10th standard). To solve this section you need to have clear concepts of limits, maxima, minima, among others. You should solve a lot of questions to practice and achieve perfection.

Choose your approach:

There can be two perfect approaches to solve a paper like CLAT. You need to choose what works best for you. When the questions are given in the form of a passage, you can come back to passage to identify those parts where answers may be present. This may not work well in case of a complex question. Many candidates read the questions first and then go through the passage to find related answers. This approach may save time but is risky. You must go through the passage before attempting any sample paper. Elimination or Selection:

When it comes to objective type questions, a candidate has two ways to find the right answer, elimination and selection. Selection, of course, is mostly used widely. When you have absolute certainty about a particular answer without hesitation. But where you’re in doubt, keep away from the least possible options applying elimination and choose from the remaining options to improve your chances of scoring well.

Managing your time during the test:

CLAT needs you to solve 100 questions in 120 minutes. It means on an average you have less than a minute per question. All questions wouldn’t require equal time, some would need more and some less. You should not waste any minute and mark quickly the answers once decided.

Making best use of available resources:

If you visit CLAT website, you’ll find a link to sample questions. Answer to these questions have also been provided. The best way to understand appropriate rationale for correct answer has also been mentioned. Also under the link of “Learning Tools and Materials” comprehensive explanation of the questions and attacking solving strategy are given. To all those candidates whose application for CLAT is accepted the Consortium organizing the exam will provide access to a learning platform containing preparatory material. After preparing the preparatory tests candidates may check their scores which can be improved with further practice.

Exclusive guides for CLAT preparation are available in the market. You may get one or two for you after ascertaining their quality. Various websites also provide free access to preparation material including sample questions and model papers etc.

National Law Universities

Your CLAT score is accepted at various other institutes for admission to LLB or five years integrated courses. So even if you’re not targeting the National Law Universities, you may think of having a CLAT score which will be handy for those who for some reason or other were not able to make any of the 22 National Law Universities. However you need to make sure that the institute accepting you on the basis of CLAT score provides quality education, charges reasonable fee and the degree offered by it comes value in the job market.
